Brief but Interesting Newsworthy Specimens Prepared for the Edification of our Readers.

The Erie and Niagara Railway has been amalgamated with the Canada Southern.

The Earl of Fife, who has been created a duke by the Queen, takes the title of the Duke of Fife.

Mrs. Carpenter, a widow lady of Grimaby, was thrown from her buggy and killed by her horse running away.

The Egyptian Government has notified the French Government that the latter's refusal to accept the conversion scheme will cost Egypt yearly £200,000.

Dr. McIlwain, the player of Capt. Dawson, has been expelled from the South Carolina Medical Society for immoral, unprofessional and ungentlemanly conduct.

The Parliament members of the House of Commons intend to demand that a committee of enquiry be appointed to ascertain the origin of the Pigott forgeries.

There seemed to be no doubt now that the two-pled air ship, which ascended from Williamsburg, N. Y., on Tuesday, was lost at sea, and that Prof. Hagan was drowned.

Mrs. Benton, widow of the late Master Mechanic Benton, Canada Southern Railway, fell through a trapdoor into the cellar at her residence, in St. Thomas, on Thursday morning and was seriously injured.

It is reported that, in view of the exceptional circumstances now prevail in the politics of France, President Carnot will issue a manifesto to the country before the general elections.

The Shah is not a fool. When told that Mr. Gladstone was about to celebrate his fiftieth marriage anniversary, he said: "It is better to live fifty years with one woman than one year with fifty women."

Both France and the United States are anxious to obtain possession of a small island under the jurisdiction of the Haytian Government, which commands the entrance to the Panama canal.

The Rome Reformers say: If the Pope, in the event of his departure from Italy, should contemplate resorting to arms to win back temporal power, he would find himself confronted with insuperable obstacles.

Searle and O'Connor have not been doing much real training as yet for the race for the sculling championship of the world, which takes place in the beginning of September.

In the letting Searle is a heavy favorite at odds of 3 to 1 and 4 to 1.

Joseph Medill, of Chicago has written to the Earl of Aberdeen, refuting the London Times insinuation that the signers of the Illinois addresses to Mr. Gladstone were Irishmen or members of the Clan-na-Gael.

A London cable says Mr. Henry George will sail for New York in the Umbria on Saturday. He was entertained Thursday night at the rooms of the Society of British Artists by a number of friends. During his visit he has spent eighty engagements.

The Army in Trouble—Two Serious Accidents.

JULY 22.—The annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association was held here Thursday last. Dr. E. H. Dewar presided. There were present members of the association from all parts of Canada. The officers were elected: R. V. Scoville, President; Andrew Pattullo, 1st Vice-President; H. P. Moore, 2nd Vice-President; W. R. Clime, Secretary-Treasurer; J. B. Traves, Assistant Secretary. Executive Committee—L. H. Hough, D. Creighton, L. C. Jackson, L. A. Davidson, J. S. Brinsley. The association left on Friday for a trip to the maritime provinces.

A very serious accident, which in one instance at least has resulted fatally, occurred at the new Rose avenue school last week. A cross bar supporting a scaffold gave way, precipitating those on it, three in number, to the ground. One of them, Alexander Carey, residing in Church street, near Carlton, was killed outright. The other two, Samuel Garland, 93 Boulton avenue, and John Cowdy, 111 Sherbourne street, were seriously hurt, both being removed to the hospital in the ambulance. A bricklayer's laborer named Adam O'Leary also sustained several injuries but refused to be taken to the Hospital.

Another sudden death occurred in the new building being erected on Queen street west, opposite the Avenue, Toronto. A painter, named James Bridgford, living at 135 George street, was in the act of bringing a ladder from the sidewalk into the building upon quitting work, when he fell heavily forward, and before assistance could be secured life was extinct. In falling Bridgford's head struck the edge of a carpenter's bench, inflicting a severe cut upon his forehead. Mr. Bridgford had been taken with a fit on a previous occasion when driving a street car, but the trouble was not thought serious.

The Salvation Army has been a standing nuisance in Eglington for the past six months. The special constable of the police, who has been Oulcott's hotel, and time and again have the red-shirts swarmed upon Mrs. Oulcott's grounds, beating their drums and apparently making as much noise as possible. When this lady's husband died some months ago, the army surrounded the hotel and behaved very rudely, and made many unbecoming remarks about her husband's business. Last week they again became unbearably noisy and the result was that two of the army men were arrested and not paying their fine were imprisoned.

A REMARKABLE LETTER.

How Two Conventions were Wrought by His Influence.

A young Scotchman named James Hamilton was living in one of the cities in the Southern States, and being an earnest Christian, he found plenty of work for his Master. Among other things he taught a Bible class in connection with the church which he had joined, consisting of a dozen boys, from fifteen to twenty years of age. Not only did he make the most of the one hour on Sunday, but he also invited the boys to visit him at his rooms, where he could have the opportunity of speaking separately and individually to each one.

He had great influence over them, for he had won their confidence, and they loved him. Quite suddenly, Allan Graham, one of his scholars, through an old friend of his father, received the offer of an excellent situation in one of the Northern States, and he must go at once, in order to secure it. He asked to say farewell to his teacher and friend, but time was pressing, and their interview a short one. As they grasped each other's hands, James said, "We have had time for a few only words, my boy, but I have a very important and special message for you, which I will write; look out for my letter!" A few days later Allan's arrival in his new home, this welcome letter was received. He was lonely and home-sick, and as he looked at the well known and familiar handwriting, he could see before him the earnest face and affectionate glance of his teacher, what would he not give for a word from him? He knew well the position he occupied in that large, deep heart, and his heart was full. When, at length, he opened the letter, he read it, and re-read it, and then read it again until his eyes were so full of tears that he could not see the lines. What was this letter that produced such strong emotion, and moved him so deeply? It contained an urgent, most affectionate, and earnest appeal, that he would, now, at this instant, give himself up, heart, soul and life, to the service of the Lord Jesus Christ; that he would be trying for him, not only at that moment, but all through the night. Although deeply affected, not at once did he yield to that earnest, tender pleading, for he had the same battle to fight which all must pass through. The tempter stood beside him, and whispered in his ear, "Do not be influenced by this foolish letter; be a man, and decide for yourself. You are just about to enter gay and fashionable society, where you will meet people of influence, who will advance your interests in the world; no servant of Christ ever yet became a man of fashion such as you might be, sought after, and admired." Almost he was on the verge of yielding to this seductive picture, when just at that instant these words flashed before his eyes, as if written in letters of fire: "The fashion of this world passeth away." "Yes," he said, "those are the friends who would advance my interests in this life—but how would it be in death?" All through the silent hours of the night, the struggle went on, but just as the first faint flush of dawn was seen in the eastern sky, it was over; he was pale and weary, but oh, so happy, for that letter from his faithful teacher, and his prayers that night, had touched his heart, and won his soul for Christ.

What words can describe the pure joy felt by James Hamilton, when he received his boy's reply? It was as the angels feel, when on this earth a soul is born from death unto life. Allan Graham at once acknowledged Christ as his Master, and as the years went on, he stood high in the regard of his fellow men. His word was as good as his bond, everything prospered to which he put his hand, and he was esteemed by those whose esteem was an honor. He married a lovely girl, who was a true helpmeet in every sense of the word. But the brightness of this happy time was overshadowed by the death of the friend to whom he owed so much, and James Hamilton, not yet in the prime of life, and in the midst of his work, departed to be with Christ, leaving behind him a precious name and memory, which shall not be forgotten. A few bright, happy years passed away, and then the lovely young wife was quite suddenly called away from earth, leaving her husband and little son, bereaved and desolate. This boy, who was called Hamilton, in memory of his father's friend, was a fine, intelligent little fellow, and as his father refused to part with him, he was taught at home. The careful training bore fruit, and as he grew to manhood, he was a son of whom any father might have been proud. The closest sympathy existed between them, on all subjects save one only. Hamilton was a consistent attendant at all the services in his father's church, and had a high respect for all that was of good report, but he did not believe in personal consecration to Christ. He thought he could be a good man, a good citizen, and very happy, without it, and whenever his father upon him the importance of decision for Christ, he drew back in silent reserve. The years passed away, and Allan Graham also entered into matrimony, leaving his father, and heir to a large fortune. The night after the funeral he was looking over the papers in his father's writing table, when on unlocking a small drawer he saw to his surprise that it contained one letter only, tied with ribbon, and carefully dated. Supposing that in some way it concerned his beautiful young mother, whom he could just remember, he opened it reverently, when he perceived that it was addressed to his father, by the pet name of his boyhood, and on turning to the signature he remembered having heard his father say that a letter from his faithful teacher had been the turning point in his life. This, then, was that letter, and how carefully preserved!

Led by a spiritual instinct, and as if conscious that his work was not yet completed, his father had left this letter where his son would find it, when lonely and bereaved. Inexpressibly touched by all these circumstances, he read it, and re-read it, until every line was impressed upon his memory. He looked at the date, and counted the time since it was written. Nearly thirty years—more than a century—had rolled away, and the hand of him who had penned those lines was now as dust, but "he being dead, yet speaketh," and so that earnest, loving appeal had touched another heart, and won another soul for Christ. When Hamilton Graham knelt beside the communion table, in the same place where he had so often seen his father kneel, he felt that he was not alone, but that though unseen by mortal eye, his father, and his father's friend, had been witnesses of the outward signs of his union and communion with Christ. That letter is preserved in the family as a sacred heir-loom more precious than gold. And who shall say that its work is finished, or that it may not yet win other hearts for our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ?

THE HOME CIRCLE.

Orange Cream Sponge Cake.—One and one-half cups of sugar, two cups of flour, one-half cup cold water, yolks of five eggs and whites of two, the rind and juice of one orange, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in layers. Whip one cupful of thick cream to a stiff froth, and stir gradually into it half a cupful of powdered sugar; grate into it the yellow of one orange rind. Spread thickly between the layers of cake.

Lemon or Orange Cream.—Take one lemon or two oranges, grate, add one cup of sugar, half a cupful of ice water and one cupful of cream; beat the whites of three eggs and stir in. Warm a gill of milk, in which mix two tablespoonfuls of corn-starch; let thicken and stir in. Set on ice. Whip a quart of cream, flavor with essence of almond and pour over.

Kedgerie.—Remove all the bones from some cold boiled fish and flake it into small pieces. Mix with it about half a cupful of cold butter, rice, a couple of hard-boiled eggs cut up, and a few pieces of cold potato. Put the mixture in a small saucepan with a lump of butter, a little pepper and salt, and a well-beaten egg. Stir it over the fire till quite hot.

Bishop's Bread.—Beat fourteen ounces of sugar with the yolks of six eggs and the whites of three for half an hour. Then add slowly eight ounces of flour, six ounces of blanched almonds cut in thin strips, six ounces of raisins and three ounces of citron cut in fine pieces. Pour in a well-greased pan and bake slowly.

Salad Dressing.—Peel and boil a large potato; mash well and, when cold, add half a pound of butter, a quarter of a pound of mustard and a little salt; stir well together; add two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and vinegar very slowly, stirring constantly so that it may be very smooth. This is nice with chopped celery or cabbage.

Aline Padding.—This pudding is a Scotch one. Mix half a pound of finely chopped apples, a quarter pound of chopped suet, a quarter pound of flour and a quarter pound of breadcrumbs; make a good custard with the yolks of three eggs and half a pint of milk; mix this with the other ingredients until the whole is in a stiff paste, and flavor with essence of lemon. Put the pudding into a buttered mold and tie it closely in a floured cloth. Boil for three hours; when turned out serve with arrowroot sauce flavored with sherry and sweetened; a little cochineal in the sauce is an improvement to the color.

French Salad.—In winter this is made principally of beautifully blanched endive, washed delicately clean and broken into small branches with the fingers; then taken from the water and shaken dry in a basket kept for the purpose, or in a fine cloth; then arranged in the salad bowl and stewed with herbs, tarragon generally when in season, minced small. The dressing is not added until just before the salad is eaten. In summer a young lettuce is substituted for the endive and intermixed with a variety of herbs.

Fat for Frying.—Just here let me tell thee how to prepare fat for frying that will not have the disagreeable taste or smell that lard has; neither will it be so expensive. Have thy butcher reserve for thee, say about ten pounds at a time, of the best beef fat, and cut it up into small pieces. When it is brought into the kitchen put it into a pan and cover it with cold water; let it stand half an hour or so, as convenient. Then take it out, putting it into a broad kettle over the back of the stove to gradually try out. When done strain it off into a pan with one corner of the towel in the bottom, and let it settle in the water or on the cake of fat, and the next day it can be melted over and poured into jars for use. For frying I prefer beef fat for many things, also the kettles for that purpose consisting of a double kettle, the lower one for the fat, with a side handle for allowing the upper one, which has holes in it, to be hung upon it, and so drain off all superfluous fat from the articles fried. Have all pieces of fat from steaks or roasts of beef saved, tried out and strained. Chicken fat, as it is taken from the chickens before they are cooked, is very nice for making mince pies, gingerbread, &c., by some considered nice for short-cakes and biscuits. Mutton fat I know of no use for (as it is impossible to disguise the taste) except for chapped hands and the like, but all such scraps are good for soap grease, and that can be easily made, and is very useful for cleaning purposes. Fat from sausage meat is good for frying potatoes, also for gingerbread. Just try it if these feels disposed to doubt it.

How a Duke Caught Cold.

A slim young man in the height of fashion was violently sneezing in a street car, when a companion remarked, "Aw, Charles, dear boy, how d'ye catch that dreadful cold." "Aw, dear fellow, left my cane in the lower hall today, and in sucking the ivory handle, so dreadful cold chilled me to death." If Charles had used Dr. Harvey's Red Pine Gum his cold would not trouble him very much, or he would not have had to resort to Dr. Wilson's prescription drugstore.

A Family Affair.

We have used Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in our family of six persons during twelve years, and in all cases of diarrhoea, summer complaint, etc., it never fails to cure. This valuable medicine should be in every family. Miss ANNA ALLEN, Harley, Ont. 2

Severe Attack.

Miss Beila Elliot, of Pontypool, Ont., writes: "My brother and I were both taken ill with a severe attack of diarrhoea, having tried other remedies, we tried Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which gave immediate relief."

"They have a large sale in my district," says a well known druggist, "than any other pill on the market, and give the best satisfaction for sick headache, biliousness, indigestion, etc., and when combined with Johnston's Tonic Bitters, Johnston's Tonic Liver Pills will perform what no other medicine has done before for suffering humanity." Pills 25 cents per bottle. Bitters 50 cents and $1 per bottle. Sold by Goode Druggist, Albion block, Goderich, sole agent.

Mr. Jas. Robb and wife, of Wheeling, West Virginia, accompanied by Miss Jessie Simpson, of London, spent a few days recently with their uncle, Mr. Chas. Robb, of Tuckersmith.

Rheumatic Pains.

Require no description, since, with rare exception, all at some time have experienced their twinges. Rheumatism is not easily dislodged, only the most powerful penetrating remedies reach to its very foundations. The most successful treatment known, and it is now frequently resorted to by medical men, is the application of that now famous remedy for pain—Polson's Nervine. It is safe to say that nothing yet discovered has afforded equal satisfaction to the suffering. A trial can be made at once, as sample bottles of Nervine can be had at the drug stores for 10 cents, large bottles 25 cents.
