Saturday, August 13, 1910. Hopeful Signs. A pleasant feature of the report of Supt. Curtis on Methodist School is the increased interest of parents in of doing better in future. the schooling of their children which he has observed during his tenure of the Superintendency. He remarks: "In my first report I felt obliged to express regret at the lack of interest on the part of parents in the education of their children. There is still room for improvement in this respect; but I am happy to report that a vast days. change for the better has taken place in the ten years. The old feelings of indifference respecting the presence of a school, or its effective- | Hearing postponed till Monday. ness, or whether children were in attendance or not, has largely disappeared; and in its place has come a spirit of eagerness for educational facilities and determination to secure at any cost the best that can be had." There are many signs of this change for the better, and notably the centia to-day. response which Governments have been called upon to make to appeals for larger educational grants during the past ten years and more particularly during the past six years. Parents have interested themselves more than in the past. Newspapers have devoted more space to topics on education of children. More discussions have been held in Synods, Conferences, and the Legislature than in the past; Governments have become more sensitive to public demands for these purposes; and every one of these factors contributes a sensible quota towards forming a Public Coinion which is ever growing and which will soon become insistent on Newfoundland children having a stronger and better scholastic training for the fight of life.

Suspect Arrested Not Quincy Murderer.

Last night the police arrested what s believed to be the much-wanted Quincy, Mass., murderer, For the past few days the Provincial police were stirred up by a telegram sent t the chief of police in Boston asserting that Louis Restelli, who, two eeks ago in a drunken frenzy, mixkilled his mother, a granite quarry owner and seriously wounded his brothers and several others in Quincy, was making his way to North Sydney intending to embark on the steam er Bruce for St. George's Bay Nfld. As a result the past three days were busy ones for the minions of the law in the three Sydneys. fact he was alleged to have made the old barn on the fox farm at Upper North Sydney his headquarters. Every policeman and county and rovincial constable in the four above named places were conspicuous figures, and all tried hard to win their spurs a la Inspector Dew of Crippen

The climax was reached yesterday morning when a swarthy looking-fellow was espied by the Sydney squad. In fact the supposed Restelli approached Chief McEachern, said he was a nsmith out of a job. He was told to go to a certain tin shop in the new city, and a constable was ordered to follow him. The suspect did not go to the tin shop but found his way here, and later took an electric car for Sydney Mines. The evening previous two Italians working at the open hearths, were granted permission to absent themselves from work at five o'clock, saying they wished to neet a fellow-countryman who was due to arrive on the train Monday evening. This created a little suspicion, but it was afterwards learned that he had nothing to do with the central figure in the Quincy tragedy, and the police confined themselves to watching the steamer Bruce.
