SWINNING THE BRITISH CHANNEL

TALK WITH THE PLUCKY EXPERT

Explains the Difficulties To Be Overcome-His Mask to Protect His Eyes.

ing and the sea was dead calm.

In an interview after his recent failure to swim the channel, Mr. Holbein explained his method of training and some of the difficulties to be overcome. He said: "The greatest obstacle which has to be contended with is cold. Remaining in the water for many hours is a terrific trial to the circulation of most people, and quite bars any training known to athletes as 'fine.' One must, therefore, so train as to leave the body well covered with flesh, in addition to having the muscular system in good condition.

"I make only a very slight change in my diet, eating a little less vegetable food than under ordinary circumstances. Once or twice a week I take a long walking exercise, and indulge in a six or seven hours' swim every two or three days. In addition to feeding well up to the day of the attempt, I believe in constant nourishment during the effort. In fact, I try to get something about every half hour. I hold that a swimmer should not wait to feel the need of food, but continue to take small quantities at short intervals. I strongly recommend raw eggs, hot milk, hot tea and bovril as refreshing and staying foods. "The steering question is one of great difficulty and anxiety for those who direct me. In my former attempt to swim the channel this was especially difficult. The sea became so rough that I was blinded by the action of the salt water upon my eyes, and had to be shouted at every moment. Once, after a tussie with a wave which pitched me about pretty violently, my pilots lost sight of me completely for some time. They eventually discovered me swimming some 150 yards became bewildered, and the steamer astern, and saw to their consternation that I had turned about and was making full speed back towards the French coast. "My eyes must be naturally weak, for they are the only part of my anatomy that seems any the worse for the long stay in the briny. After some hours' swimming the salt renders me quite blind and causes considerable agony. This blindness does not make matters easier for my pilots. I have, therefore, been experimenting this year with a small mask which tightly fits on to the upper part of my face and is fitted with two watch glasses to see through. I need hardly say that the airtight mask becomes rather depressing after a while, and I would much sooner be without one.

"Those who have known me as a 34 hours' road cyclist were surprised at my turning to swimming. I met with serious accident while cycling, which resulted in a fractured leg. The in jured limb was very stiff on recovery, and my doctor recommended swimming to benefit the limb. In carrying out his directions I grew so proficient that soon became ambitious to hold some swimming records. the channel is about 21 miles, but the currents cause one to take a course resembling a capital 'W,' which lengthens the journey to about 35 or one right out of the way. Even with water to break over one's face.

one of my own invention. Lying on my back, I bring the hands from the thighs close to my body up the chest. With a turn of the wrist at the elbow I extend the arms beyond the head until the hands meet. I then bring them with an outward and downward sweep, with as much power as possible. to the thighs. In this way the hands never leave the water, and so the minimum resistance is offered to a contrary wind. This stroke also keeps me high in the water. About 22 to the minute is the rate of striking I find most profitable. My friend, Mr. Gray, who frequently times me, tells me that I rarely vary the rate by so much as one stroke a minute from start to finish.

"For a change I turn on to my side or breast for fifteen or twenty minutes, but the back stroke is the best. 21 of which are equal to about 24 or 25 of the other strokes. Needless to say, the difference of energy expended is far from being a negligible quantity in long distances.'

SAM SMALL'S COLLAPSE DEMISE OF MAJOR J. HOWE

Much for Him.

He Had To Be Led From the Platform | The Major Succumbed to Heart Dis--No Excuse to Make.

Brattleboro, Vt., Aug. 28. - Whisky taken on an empty stomach was what caused the collapse of Rev. Sam Small (the Georgian evangelist and temperance lecturer), at the big rally held here last Monday night in the interest of Percival W. Clement, local option candidate for governor.

At Montpelier several days ago Mr Small publicly said that the prohibitory law was "a damnable farce." On Monday evening, when he was introduced as the chief speaker, Mr. Small made a few incoherent remarks, and had to be led from the platform, collapsing as he reached the floor of the hall. The rally was abruptly ended.

Small, when interviewed, after admitting that whisky caused his collapse, added that he had no explanation to offer and no excuse to make. He spoke at Putney, Vt., in the afternoon, being driven there from Brattleboro. The driver of the carriage says that Mr. Small had a quart of whisky, and that he took three drinks from the bottle going up to Putney and two when coming back. Only about one-third of the whisky was gone from the bottle when some of the local option people examined it at the Brooks House after the fiasco. While Mr. Small declined to give any explanation to newspaper men, it is known that his explanation to his friends is as follows:

That he has been under a nervous strain, making sometimes two and three speeches a day; that he has used more or less liquor, and brought a quart with him to town yesterday afternoon; that he was met at the station and driven at once to Putney; that he had no opportunity to eat dinner; that he delivered an address at Putney and then started for Brattlebore without supper; that he had no opportunity to eat before going on the platform at the auditorium; that he was rober when he went into the hall, but that with the heat and no food in stomach the drink of which he took just before entering overcame him.

Mr. Small was greatly mortified. He stumped the state five years ago for

Macleod, N. W. T., Aug. 24.-Major Joseph Howe, superintendent commanding the Northwest Mounted Police, Macleod district, died very suddenly at his residence in the N. W. M. P. barracks here, on Sunday evening, Aug. 17, of heart failure.

Major Howe was a native of St. John, N. B., where he was born in 1858, son of the late John Howe, postmaster-general of New Brunswick, under the Imperial Government, and late postmaster of St. John City; also a nephew of the late Hon. Joseph Brown, Hallfax. N. S.

Major Howe joined the N. W. M. P. in 1879 as a constable, and rose steadily in the service to one of the most important positions in the time-honored force that the military authorities could grant. He served in the Northwest rebellion of 1885, and had command of the gun detachment at the battle of Duck Lake, where he received a severe wound. In 1900 he volunteered for service in South Africa, and went out as second in command of the Canadian Mounted Rifles. For over twelve months he served his Queen and country with distinction, and on his return to Canada was given the important command of this district. Major Howe leaves a wife and two children to mourn his loss, and his death will be very severely regretted throughout the Territories and in other parts of the Dominion where he was

Toronto, Aug. 28.—Mr. L. W. Pais-ley, of Chilliwhack, B. C., secretary of the British Columbia Live Stock Association, called on Mr. A. P. Westervelt at the legislative buildings yesterday. Mr. Paisley wants cattlehe does not exactly know how many yet, but if he can get the kinds he wants, at the prices he wants, he may take west with him in two or three weeks as many as 1,500 head. Creameries are numerous, and one in Mr. Paisley's municipality produces $0,000 pounds of butter a month, for all of which there is a keen market. As yet not beef enough is raised to supply home consumption, and every year large quantities are imported from Alberta. "We hope to change that pretty soon," said Mr. Paisley, "because we like to keep our money at home."

Many of the herds are acquiring a fairly high grade of breeding for which Ontario stock is responsible.

Ottawa, Aug. 28. — Mr. J. Carling Kelly, the broker, who has recently established himself in Ottawa, states that a combination of some eleven pa-per mills is being formed in England, with a capital of $25,000,000. Negotiations are now under way, and are expected to be closed this week. Canadian interest in the enterprise, according to Mr. Kelly, centers in the fact that the raw materials will be obtainisands in Lake Huron near the island ed here.
