The passengers who were taken off the Royal George, were willing enough to speak, but had little to tell. The general consensus of their opinion was that the steamer was sailed off its course as it was steaming at full speed. wibrated all over the ship, followed by a crunching as the bottom of the ves-sel forced its way over the rocks, and finally came to a sudden stop. No person was seriously alarmed as they realized that the ship was firmly seated on solid rock within hailing distance of the shore.

There were a number of militia officers among the first-class passen-gers returning from England, including Lieut,-Col. Landry, D.O.C., of Quebec, and Major Robertson of Quebec, Lieut,-Col. Morrison of Ottawa, Lieut,-Col. Hodgeon of London, Ont., and
