THE BLACK MAN, THE RED AND THE WHITE.

At Massey Hall last night, the unique spectacle was presented of a black man and a red man together on a platform facing an audience of white men. Mr. Booker T. Washington was the speaker of the evening, and Dr. Oronhyatekha officiated as his chairman. The former is probably the ablest champion on this continent of a downtrodden but ever increasing race, while the latter is no doubt the best known representative to-day of the once proud but now fast disappearing American Indian. It is, moreover, notable that the speaker of the evening addressed those whose ancestors dispossessed the red man of his country, and who by force imported the black man to this continent.

Mr. Washington, who possesses in full the physical peculiarities of his race, is decidedly a man of parts. His remarkable career and the splendid work he has done for the uplifting of his people had made this clear long before he appeared in Toronto, and his address of last night emphasized the fact. A man of pleasing address and an orator of no mean powers, he at the outset secured the sympathy of his hearers, and by means of a certain manly, fervid earnestness he carried them with him to the end of his address.

As Zola saw in the gospel of work the salvation of the French, so Booker T. Washington sees in religious and industrial education and intelligent labor the final deliverance of the Southern American negro. In his world famous Tuskegee Institute he is teaching his black brothers and sisters to put brain, skill and dignity into the work which their hands find to do, and those educated at this school are going out and day by day disseminating these same doctrines amongst the nine million blacks of the South. And Mr. Washington shows that great results have already been obtained. In different parts of the South whole communities of independent, self-supporting negro farmers are to be found, and, in the State of Georgia alone, the blacks own and pay taxes upon $15,000,000 worth of property. In short, by slow degrees, the black man is learning to help himself, getting on his feet, buying land of his own, and establishing a bank account of his own, and, by so doing, he has in great measure won the respect of his white fellow-citizens. The orator sees in the continuance of this educative and uplifting movement the solution of the Southern race problem, the means by which the two peoples will ultimately be brought to live together in amity. As he tersely puts it, once the black man is well enough off to lend money to the white man, the white man who borrows that money will not prevent the black man who loans it from going to the polls.

A curious side-light was thrown on the question which the speaker dealt with, by the presence and evident attitude of a Southern American gentleman in the audience. This party, who hails from Kentucky, and is widely-traveled and, generally speaking, liberal-minded, listened with a very apparent lack of sympathy to the colored orator's remarks. The big audience responded readily to the eloquent black man's efforts, went into roars of laughter at his well-told anecdotes, and sympathetically followed him in the more serious portions of his address. But the Southerner sat unmoved. He would not laugh with Mr. Washington, nor could he bring himself to applaud his eloquent periods. In conversation with The World afterwards, this gentleman said that, tho he appreciated Mr. Washington's ability, he could not forget that he was a "nigger." It is this very ingrained prejudice among the whites of the South that the black has to overcome, and he has a big task before him. We believe, however, that Mr. Washington is working on the right lines, and we say "all honor to him, and godspeed him."

TAINTED JOURNALISM.

"Damnably vulgar" is a term which fitly describes much of the European press news which the daily papers of the United States have for long served up to their readers. A few journals there are, such as The New York Post, which print sensible special cables from across the Atlantic, but these are only the exceptions which prove the almost universal rule. During the past few months, the objectionable quality of the so-called "American" cables from Europe has been very noticeable. Nothing has been too sacred for the attacks of these sensation-mongering correspondents, and nobody of importance in the Old World has been safe from the penstabs of these yellow journalists. Their chief object in life has been, and is, to write something to tickle the morbid palates of their readers, and in order to attain their end they have ransacked state after state and court after court in Europe. Monarch and subject are alike the prey of these vandal scribes. It is fresh in our memory that the young King of Spain has been made to subject his Queen mother to brutal treatment; the Czar of Russia has been made to appear the imbecile tool of a spiritualist, the Czarina has been painted as a monomaniac, over her failure to bear a man child; the King of the Belgians has been accused of acting the inhuman father by the very side of his dead Queen's bier; the names of the Queen of Holland and her consort have been dragged thru the mire of scandal; members of the English royal family have been represented as under the influence of Christian Science, or faith cure; an unholy matrimonial alliance has been alleged against an heir to the British throne; all sorts of stories have been printed about one of the Balkan State princes; the family of the Emperor of Austria has suffered much in the same way; the memory of the late Herr Krupp, the German gunmaker, has been blasted by a suggestion of suicide, and the English court officials have been accused of holding Lord Roberts up for a small fortune before they would allow him to enjoy the full investiture of the Order of the Garter. These are mere samples of the class of "news," week after week, served up to the readers of the United States newspapers, and those readers could add to the list indefinitely.

But what we object most to is that a great deal of this "stuff" finds its way into Canadian papers, poisoning the minds of Canadians against things British and European, and exalting by contrast things "American." It is high time that the Canadian newspapers obtained a distinct cable service of their own. Canada is now big enough and rich enough to become independent of the United States news agencies, and steps should be taken to secure such independence.

If Signor Marconi does not soon solve the question of cheap trans-Atlantic communication by wireless telegraphy between Cape Breton and England, it will be the bounden duty of the Canadian government to procure the laying of an all-British-Canadian cable across the North Atlantic.

And in the name of good taste, and for the sake of our nerves—until Canada does secure an independent cable press service—let our editors freely blue-pencil the "rot" that comes into their hands from across the line.

CHURCH GOING IN TORONTO AND NEW YORK.

As shown in an article published today, statistics compiled in the Manhattan borough of New York City, a population of 1,931,162 is served by 366 Protestant and Roman Catholic churches and chapels. In Toronto, a population of 220,000, is served by 210 churches, or 260 churches and missions. In other words, a densely populated portion of New York boasts one church or chapel to every 5400 of its inhabitants, while Toronto possesses one church to every 1000 of its inhabitants. In proportion to its size, this city has five times as many places of worship as has the Manhattan borough of New York.

The Church News Association of New York figures that in the district referred to only one-third, or about 500,000 out of 1,500,000, adults attend divine service on the Sabbath.

In contrast with this statement, we have the assertion of the Toronto City Mission that two-thirds of the entire population of Toronto regularly go to church on Sunday. In New York two-thirds and in Toronto one-third of the people are stay-at-homes.

Judged by the standard of church-going, Torontonians are just about twice as good as New Yorkers, but we must not grow pharisaical about it.

RELIGION IN NEW YORK.

New York Sun: According to a census taken by The Church News Association, the average attendance at the 366 Catholic and Protestant churches and chapels of the Manhattan borough of New York, on the first three Sundays in the present month, "sunshine Sundays," at all their services, aggregated 451,631 adult persons, out of a total population of 1,931,162, of whom 1,448,189 are adults. That is, nearly one million, or two-thirds of the adult population, did not go to church.

The percentage of stay-at-homes must have been even greater, for the census was taken at a season when the aggregate of visitors to the town is unusually large, and it may be assumed that these contributed very considerably to the attendance on the churches. Even allowing for this addition from outside, however, the showing is better than that which has been made in similar censuses taken in other towns of both the east and west.

Allowance, however, must be made for duplication in the census lately taken in New York, for the totals were obtained by adding the morning and evening attendance, and in Protestant churches especially this involved counting the same people twice over. Among Catholics attendance at only a single service is usual. When, therefore, the census gives the Catholic attendance at 317,454 to 134,177 Protestant, this difference of habit must be borne in mind.

Taking all the churches together, only 31 per cent. of the attendance was of men, and in the Catholic churches alone, only 22 per cent. In the Episcopal churches it was 33 1-2 per cent. It was greatest in the Congregational, 51 per cent., or a majority. In the Presbyterian it was 42 per cent., in the Baptist and the Reformed 41, and in the Methodist, 45 per cent. Christian Science also appeals to women more numerously than to men, 62 per cent. of the attendance at its temples being of women.

Moody, the evangelist, estimated that of the whole population of the United States less than 30 per cent. are regular attendants at religious services, Catholic or Protestant, and more than one-half never go to any church service at all. Sam Jones has only recently lamented that in Paducah, in Kentucky, with a population of 22,000, a census of the church attendance even on "beautiful Sunday mornings" shows only from 1200 to 1500 in the churches.

CENTRE BRUCE.

Editor World: It seems in doubt according to report, whether the protest against Col. Clarke, M.L.A., for Centre Bruce will be proceeded with. Wise Mr. Ross! If you are as politically sagacious as you are credited with being, Mr. Ross, you will leave Col. Clarke undisturbed in his rightful seat in Centre Bruce, for I think I may promise you in the name of the Conservatives of Centre Bruce that if you bring on another election in this riding, notwithstanding that it is early in the season for snow, we will give your candidate such a snowing under that he will think he has struck the ice or glacial period in the age of this venerable earth. Centre Bruce has been Liberal for years, but it has now cast out and rejected the incapable and besmirched government of which you are the head, Mr. Ross. Furthermore, I would say to you that you will require to spell "fight" day and night to hold yourself in power much longer. You are a past master at humbug, which interpreted meaneth political dishonesty, but even to this cometh in due time an end.

Yours as a "Looker-on in Venice,"
Thomas O'Hagan.

AT THE THEATRES.

Princess, "The Show Girl," girls, fun and catchy music.
Grand, "Shaun Rhue," as only Joe Murphy can play it.
Toronto, "The Scout's Revenge," thrilling melodrama.
Shea's, vaudeville of an excellent kind.
Star, Watson's American Burlesquers.

Speaking of the drama, "A Modern Magdalen," which will be presented at the Princess on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week, with Wednesday matinee, The New York Journal says: "No such play has been seen in years. As for the company it is the best acting one in America, and gives a production complete in every detail." The Amelia Bingaam Special Stock Company comprises such artists as Roselle Knott and W. J. Ferguson, supported by Franklyn Roberts, Daniel Jarrett, Victor M. de Silke, Harry Lilliford, Bernard McGuire, George Spink, Frederick Leet, Agness Findlay, Katherine Fisher, Marion Johnson, Laura Osborn, Alice Braham and Eveline Haven. The sale opens this morning.

One of the most even-running shows of the season is that given at Shea's this week. There is fun galore and many novel acts, every one a feature. The Elinore Sisters will be one of the features of the bill next week. This pair are about as funny as anything in vaudeville. Cushman, Holcombe and Curtis have a new skit, entitled "A Winter Session," which is said to be very humorous. Then there will be the Five Juggling Johnsons, Eckert and Berg, Loney Haskel, Swan and O'Day and Lillian and Shorty Dewitt.

"Spotless Town," which comes to the Grand next week, is one of the latest additions to a class of entertainment that is very popular nowadays. It is simply a string of fun, music and amusement—affording devices presented in a bright enjoyable manner by a number of clever comedians, singers and dancers. From first to last its mission is to create laughter. The company includes Carlin and Brown, the Electric Four, Thomas F. Reilly, Speck Bros., Marie Richmond, Ada Henry, Adelaide Marsden and a number of others.

"The Topsy Turvy" burlesquers at the Star next week present a one-act musical farce called "Champagne Charley at Hotel Topsy Turvy," and close with "Foxy Grandpa's Picnic." In the olio are Burt Fuller, Daly and Vokes, Cunningham and Revere, Frankie Emmett and Keno, Welch and Melrose.

A battle between U. S. soldiers and a band of outlaws is one of the exciting incidents depicted in "Nobody's Claim," which will be at the Toronto next week. The scenes are laid in the west, beyond the Rockies, and the story is a thrilling one.

The Majestic Theatre, Boston, soon to be opened, embodies some original and interesting ideas in its construction. It has been built to resemble in shape a gigantic megaphone, the usual break between the top of the proscenium arch and the ceiling of the auditorium being wanting. Instead the auditorium extends from the proscenium in sweeping curves, so that any line following the wall or ceiling from the stage to the front of the theatre would form an arc of a circle, while a cross-section of the ceiling would show an arc of ellipse. There are no columns to support the balconies, and from every one of the 1700 seats contained, it is claimed, the actors will be seen and heard without difficulty.

Septimus Winner, who wrote that world-famous song, "Listen to the Mocking Bird," is dead at his home in Philadelphia. He was born in 1825. He was an expert musician.

"Old Limerick Town" is proving the most successfully put on play that Chauncey Olcott has yet produced.

Alberto Jonas, the Spanish pianist, who will appear to-morrow night with Mlle. Zelie de Lussan in Massey Hall, will contribute these numbers to the excellent program arranged: Pareerelle in A Minor, and Turkish March, from the Ruins of Athens of Beethoven (A Rubenstein); Etude, Op.24, No. 1, (Moszkowski); "Three Northern Dances" (Alberto Jonas); "To the Spring," "At Your Feet," and "I Love Thee," (Edward Greig); March Militaire (Schubert-Tausig). On his first appearance here six months ago, when he won unstinted praise, he used a Heintzman & Co. piano, and he has requested that a similar instrument be at his disposal tomorrow evening.

Donald M. Barton, who is to appear at Association Hall next Tuesday, Dec. 2, is an old Toronto boy, being born and raised in the West End. Six years ago Sandow introduced him to the public as his best pupil, and presented him with a handsome gold medal. Sandow, speaking of Mr. Barton's lecture and work, said: "It interested me very deeply. It could not be better." Prof. Barton will use 2-lb., 16-lb., 80, 100 up to nearly 200-lb. dumbbells, cord-tearing, fencing and posing. From an athletic standpoint this will be one of the best entertainments ever given in Toronto.

Hon. George E. Foster Will Speak.

Great interest is centred in the week night campaign meeting of the Canadian Temperance League that will be held in Bathurst-street Methodist Church to-morrow evening, in the fact that the Hon. George E. Foster, ex-Minister of Finance, will speak. This will be Mr. Foster's first public utterance from the platform in connection with the campaign to close the bar-room. J. A. Paterson, K.C., and others will also address the meeting and the Beveridges will sing many of their stirring campaign songs.

A DIRGE

The wintry west extends his blast,
And hail and rain does blaw;

And pass the heartless day.

AN ALL-CANADIAN COMPANY

To Be Formed to Develop Water Power at Niagara Falls.

"Our organization is not complete, and as yet there is no information of a definite character that can be given the public," said Frederic Nicholls, managing director of the Canadian General Electric Company, to The World yesterday regarding the movement for the formation of a new company for the purpose of further developing the power at Niagara Falls, in which he is interested. The personnel of the company would be composed for the most part of Toronto capitalists, who entered into the scheme feeling that Canadian consumers ought not to be entirely at the mercy of American companies. Application was made for power privileges, and, if granted, the power would be developed promptly so that at least part of Canada's great national heritage in water power would be developed for use in this country. It was intended to have all the power that the new company generated disposed of to Canadians for use in this country. Mr. Nicholls stated that the amount of the capital was among the matters yet to be determined.

William Mackenzie, president of the Toronto Railway, is among the applicants for the power privilege. It is said that by the plans of the new company carried out, together with the four works now in operation, at least 25 per cent. of the great power at the Falls will be harnessed and used for industrial purposes.

The first debate of the series took place on Saturday evening, November 22, at 'Varsity, between 'Varsity and McMaster, resulting in favor of the latter. McMaster ladies, Miss M. O. Ardley and Miss I. J. Munro had the affirmative of the question: "Resolved, that man is more the creature of environment than of heredity," and Miss Johnston and Miss Pringle upheld the negative for 'Varsity. The next debate will be held in January between St. Hilda's and Victoria.

TRIP TO SUGAR PLANT.

About 450 Visitors Looked It Over in Berlin.

Berlin, Nov. 26.—About 450 visitors arrived to-day to inspect the sugar beet plant of the Ontario sugar beet industry, the first in the history of Canada. It was expected that this number would have been nearly doubled had the weather been favorable. The first contingent to arrive was that of St. Catharines, which numbered about 200 and arrived at noon. Mr. McLaren and Mr. Campbell, president and secretary of the Board of Trade, and party of newspaper men, accompanied them. About the same number arrived later from Newmarket, known by the North York contingent. The visitors were made up chiefly of representative farmers and seemed greatly interested in the new industry. The Hon. E. J. Davis accompanied them. He expressed himself as deeply interested in the sugar beet question. The visitors expressed themselves as being well pleased with Berlin hospitality and left for their homes this evening. Mr. Williams, manager of the Ontario Sugar Company, spared no pains to make the visit interesting.

The engagement of John Dillon, M.P., to speak in Toronto on Monday evening next in Association Hall with Hon. Edward Blake, M.P., will be filled by Joseph Devlin, M.P., one of the younger members of the Irish party and one of its ablest orators. Mr. Dillon's illness makes it impossible for him to attend. Mr. Devlin has taken a prominent part in the organization of the present movement. He is a Belfast man. The speeches on Monday evening next will begin at 7.30 o'clock sharp, and ticket-holders are advised to be on hand early.

This treaty, they claim, would work to the injury of the fishing interests of New England.
