THE FLY IN THE OINTMENT

Every time we see that a prominent Prussian militarist has risen to his feet in Berlin and declared in his impassioned way that a policy based on might alone and not on right is doomed to lose this war, leading us to think it's about over and maybe we can loosen up a little and buy something we need now, we discover in the second paragraph that he thinks his side's policy is based on right.

Riga In Hands Of The Germans

Some of Russians Show White Feather — Italians Advance — Matters on West Front

Riga, Russia's big port on the Gulf of Riga, is in the hands of the Germans and its garrison and the civilian population are in retreat eastward.

Following up rapidly the advantage they gained in driving the Russians across the Drina River, on both sides of Ushak last Saturday, the Germans threw their main force across the river and on the heels of the former defenders, some of whom offered resistance but others of whom showed the white feather, giving the invaders no trouble in marching up the eastern bank of the Drina toward Riga—fifteen miles distant. Seeing the dissatisfaction and the inability to stem the tide of the advance, the Russian commander ordered an evacuation.

With the falling back of the Russians from the city proper and the advance of the Germans northward along both sides of the stream, the Russians still defending the western bank around Dahlen, seemingly are in danger of being caught between the two fast moving bodies of the enemy and made prisoners.

Behind them the Russians, in their retreat from Riga, are leaving the country in waste, burning villages and farms. Whether the city itself remains intact has not yet been made known, but doubtless the guns in the fortress and the ammunition stores either were moved or destroyed to prevent them falling into the hands of the Germans.

Aside from the strategic value of controlling the Gulf of Riga and of a base nearer the mouth of the Gulf of Finland at the head of which Petrograd is situated, for the moment it is impossible to see the importance of the German gain, especially with the near approach of winter, when military operations in this northern region are almost impossible. Where the Russians will draw their new line in the north to connect with that below the point of penetration by the Germans also remains to be seen.

On none of the other fronts have there been operations of great moment, except in the Austro-Italian theatre, where the Italians have made further progress on the Bainsizza Plateau and in the Brezovizza Valley and at various points along the line have repulsed fresh counterattacks launched by the Austrians. Throughout this entire theatre violent artillery duels from Tolmino to the sea.

Advices to the Italian embassy in Washington are to the effect that along the front of the present offensive the Austrians have lost 128,000 men. Reports from Udine, Italy, give the Austrian losses as one-third of the first line army.

The batteries of Field Marshal Haig are still pouring an incessant fire against the German trenches in Flanders, but as yet the anticipated new dash by his men to capture them has not started. Doubtless the knocking of the defences has not reached the limits which the British commander always requires before he throws his infantrymen into the fray. On the remainder of the front in the west, held by the British, there have been the usual trench raiding operations, in one of which, south of Monchy-Le-Preux, German dugouts and machine guns were destroyed and some prisoners taken.

Eminent English Star Seen in "The Silent Master" With Strong Support

The Imperial Theatre presented a very interesting holiday programme yesterday and the natural result was capacity business. Aside from some travel and patriotic pictures the bill consisted of a seven-act Salaisack production "The Silent Master" from the pen of E. Phillips Oppenheim, who titled his story "The Court of St. Simon." In "The Silent Master," a marquis adopts the name of Valentin Simon, and establishes a court where wealthy oppressors of the poor are punished in a summary if entirely illegal manner. They are men who cannot be reached by the law, and are thus forced to atone for their misdeeds. Valentin Simon finds the law incapable of administering justice, and so takes certain matters in his own hands, and applies socialist principles to his Court of St. Simon. Men who use wealth and influence in an unscrupulous manner are captured by Valentin's Apache machine guns, haled before the private tribunal, flogged, and what money they could be made to disgorge, devoted to alleviating the ills they had caused. "It is an interesting interweaving of history and fiction."

Robert Warwick, Olive Tell, Donald Grahame, Juliette Moore, Henri Valbel and Anna Little are the stars of the play, with Mr. Warwick, of course, the chief actor. His portrayal was fine. The piece was unusually rich in setting and appeared to have been carefully prepared in making every scene complete and effective and the story proceeded connectedly and exhaustively without jerk or inference. In fact it was a picture-book.

"The Silent Master" will be presented again tonight and also Wednesday afternoon when the matinee will consist of the Triangle comedy-drama "Madcap Midge" featuring Olive Thomas, the O. Henry story "Past One at Rooney's" and "The Silent Master." Wednesday evening and Thursday the Triangle, O. Henry and Universal Weekly films will be the bill.

ITS A GOOD NEW PROGRAMME AT THE OPERA HOUSE

Singing of John O'Malley, Noted Irish Tenor, Much Enjoyed

The offering at the Opera House this week is well up to the standard of vaudeville which has been given to the public since this line of entertainment has been inaugurated by the management of the local Opera House. The bill is marked by much singing and dancing but of such a variety that the attention of the audience is held until the end.

One of the prominent numbers of the entire show is the singing of John O'Malley, a noted Irish tenor, whose voice has been heard with great appreciation from coast to coast. O'Malley is a well trained singer and possesses a wonderful range.

The Giffain Trio, international singers, handled equally well songs of Bonnie Scotland, the Emerald Isle, La Belle France and Sunny Italy. Their repertoire is varied and they made a hit with the large crowds. The bagpipe playing was a feature.

The Bordini Brothers have a novel singing and instrumental offering all their own and offer it in the same manner.

Edwards and Beatrice in a singing, talk and acrobatic dancing sketch were given a lively reception on Saturday and they have a lively act. The man is a good acrobatic dancer and between the two they have a good act with some good jokes. One song sung by the woman, however, could be well eliminated without detracting from the merits of the sketch as a whole.

In a singing and dancing act the De-Marr Sisters have a pleasing and clean cut sketch. The character song of one of the ladies was well put over and was well received. The costumes of the act are worthy of mention and the act was given its well deserved portion of the applause.

Billie Burke, in Gloria's Romance, is as coy and winsome as ever. This week's serial closes with Gloria in the hands of

is a good food slogan for war time, or any time—better make it two meatless meals a day—it would mean health and strength for the nation. But be sure and get the right substitute for meat in a digestible form. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the ideal substitute for meat. It is 100 per cent. whole wheat prepared in a digestible form. Two or three of these little loaves of baked whole wheat make a nourishing, satisfying meal at a cost of only a few cents. Delicious with milk or cream or fruits of any kind.

Trask, Dick's murderer, with the doctor, however, not far away. The bill as a whole is well worth seeing and well worth the price of admission.

GRANDMOTHER'S BOTANIC MEDICINE

In every pioneer home the botanic recipes of our grandmothers for the treatment of disease were wonderfully dependable. Every fall the gathered her various herbs: thoroughwort, camomile, sage, pennyroyal, wormwood, rue, etc. It is interesting to note that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the most successful remedy for female ills we have, was originally prepared for home use from one of these botanic recipes, and the demand for this famous medicine has grown until over 1,000,000 pounds of roots and herbs are used annually in its preparation. It will well repay any woman who suffers from female ills to give this famous medicine a trial.
