INDIAN GIRLS OPPOSE BURIAL OF WHITE MAN

Kansas City Police Protect Mourners at Funeral in Old Wyandotte Graveyard.

Kansas City, Kan., Oct. 28.—The body of Frank Espy, a white man, was buried this week in Huron Cemetery, in the heart of the business district here, while Helena Conley, a descendant of Wyandotte Indians, stood at the head of the grave and delivered the Wyandotte Indian curse on the dead man's soul and on those responsible for the burial in the old Indian cemetery.

The grave was dug under police protection after the burial had been delayed twenty-four hours by the Conley sisters, Helena, Lydia and Ida. Police- men stood by the Indian woman during the burial and several times took hold of her when she waved her arms wildly while delivering the curse.

As the pallbearers neared the open grave with the body Helena stepped forward and raised her arm. "I forbid this burial," she commanded in a stern voice. "Take the body away."

The pallbearers did not heed her command and the burial proceeded. The Indian sisters had spent a night-long vigil standing off burial parties, but finally parked their rifles while policemen protected gravediggers, pallbearers and mourners.

The Conley sisters took their rifles and blankets to the Huron Cemetery and said they would keep out the whites forever to protect the dust of their Wyandotte ancestors. Telegraphic permission to the white people from the Haskell Indian Institute to conduct the burial caused them to end their opposition.

ing by train from London to Brighton noticed a broken wedding-ring on the finger of a woman sitting opposite them. Fearing the owner would lose the ring, one of the women drew her attention to the fracture. "It is done purposely," she replied, thanking her. "You see," she added quietly, "I have divorced my husband. Like most women, I was at first inclined to throw the ring away but I kept it out of respect for my daughter, and had it broken like this after I had met another woman who had done the same thing. "The fracture was made by a jeweler, and does not go right through this ring."

INROADS OF DESERT. Armenian Cotton and Rice Fields Are Threatened. Erivan, Armenia, Oct. 2.—(By Mail)—Certain flourishing rice and cotton fields at the foot of Mount Ararat are today threatened with the same destruction that at one time in ancient history overwhelmed the hanging gardens of Babylon, namely, failure of the system of irrigation and the inroads of desert sands. American engineers are trying to save the situation. They are going in with 500 refuge laborers, and will endeavor to reopen a thirty-mile irrigation canal from the Zanga River.

There Are Times You Wouldn't Dare Wear Poor Clothes When calling on a girl for the first time; when looking for a new position; when trying to see the president of a bank; going to church on Sunday; on the first visit to an exclusive country club—every man tries to look his best. Why then should the same man be less particular about his clothes after he has married the girl; after he is safely settled in the job; after he knows the bank president; on the days he doesn't go to church and after he becomes a member of the club? BARON ROTHSCHILD once said that holding on to a fortune was fully as difficult as accumulating it. Similarly, holding respect is as difficult as gaining it. And if good clothes are valuable in gaining the things we prize, they are even more valuable in holding them. Nothing is so bad as that oft heard remark, "There goes a fellow who used to be—and look at him now." MR. MAN, let good clothes be your first assistant. Let them hold the ladder while you climb the rungs to success. Let them go ahead of you and give you a good introduction. Let them get you into busy men's offices. Let them whisper a favorable word into the ear of your clients, your prospects, your neighbors, your associates. Will clothes do all this? Good clothes will. Are good clothes expensive? Not necessarily. It is more how and where you choose, than what you pay. We don't sell the only good clothes, but we sell only good ones. For helping men dress better is our hobby and our specialty! And our pride is in giving you such value as these— Hand-Tailored Suits $20 to $45 Hand-Tailored O'Coats $20 to $50 Creamy's 75 KING ST. Specialty Shop for Men—and Women Who Shop for Men.
