PROBABLY HARMLESS.

That the sweet lavender sold about the city some time ago by a woman did not contain any contagious disease germs is the opinion of Dr. H. L. Abramson, chief of the laboratories of the provincial department of health. To a Times reporter today he said he had taken a sample of the sweet lavender sold by the woman and another sample of sweet lavender purchased in a local drug store and innoculated two young rabbits. So far neither one has shown any ill effects.
