ST. JOHN STAR.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARCH 7, 1903.

REFORM THE BALLOT.

As the provincial legislature is soon to meet, the recollection of the outrageous scenes witnessed in this city last Saturday will be fresh in the minds of the four members from St. John, and it is perhaps fair to assume that under pressure of public opinion they will insist upon the reform of the ballot.

The Star has directed their attention to the facts of the case, and if either of the four gentlemen has any lingering doubt there is abundant evidence to prove the statements made concerning bribery and intimidation in this and other constituencies.

Mr. McKeown's eloquence could not be devoted to a better cause, and we can readily imagine how his auditors in the house and galleries would cheer him as he denounced the present iniquitous system, and called upon the legislature to purge itself of this gross offence against right and fair play. And not even Mr. McKeown could make a more impassioned appeal for an honest ballot and for the rights of the people than Mr. George Robertson. Mr. Purdy could follow with a plain, business-like statement of incidents at the north end polling booths, and Mr. Lantulum could talk impressively of things that happened in Kings and other wards in the eastern portion of the city.

If their evidence were not considered sufficient they could, no doubt, secure from reputable members of their own party, whose testimony would not be questioned, detailed statements of cases of bribery and intimidation such as would convince every member of the house of the urgent need of reform.

The Star looks forward with much pleasurable anticipation to the crusade of the St. John members against this shameful system, and promises in advance to give the fullest publicity to their addresses and the evidence they will adduce to prove their case.

HE IS HAPPY.

The announcement that Premier Tweedie is delighted with the result of the elections will occasion only a mild shock of surprise. In fact it is generally conceded that Mr. Tweedie is a very fortunate politician. Most men have to fight their own political battles, with such weapons as may be at hand. It is only Mr. Tweedie who can have a federal minister and a wad to keep the enemy from coming to close quarters. Therefore Mr. Tweedie does well to be cheerful, even if he did fail to carry his own ticket in Northumberland. He has been morally beaten, but he has the flesh-pots. He need no more than pronounce a passing eulogy on the fallen braves of his own county, and then go jauntily on his way reaping where he has not sowed and gathering where he has not sown.

A combination of circumstances has placed the liberal party of New Brunswick at the feet of Mr. Tweedie—or as much of it as is willing to make its neck his footstool. Why should he not rejoice and be glad?

"To Mr. Blair the glory, to me the gain."

Of course Mr. Tweedie rejoices. But do the liberals? Ah! There's the rub.

In the Maine legislature on Thursday, before the committee on interior waters, Peter C. Keegan of Van Buren appeared in support of the bill to authorize the St. John Lumber Co. to build and maintain piers in the St. John river in the town of Van Buren. There was no opposition.

THE VERONICA CASE.

(Liverpool paper, Feb. 24.)

At the Liverpool city police court, today, before the stipendiary, W. J. Stewart, four seamen named respectively, Otto Monson, Henri Flor, and Gustav (a German), and William Smith, described as an American, were again brought up on the charge of having wilfully murdered Capt. Shaw, the chief officer, the second officer, and four others of the crew of the British barque Veronica.

It will be remembered that the prisoners, together with a black cook and steward, also of the Veronica, arrived in Liverpool some weeks ago on board the steamer Brunswick; and in consequence of a statement by the steward that the four prisoners were arrested by Detective-Inspector Duckworth and the steward alleged that during a voyage of the Veronica between Baloxi and Monta Video the men, after murdering part of the crew, burnt the ship.

Mr. Trubshaw again appeared to prosecute, and R. J. Clarke represented Monson and Flor. Mr. Trubshaw said that he hoped to be in a position to proceed with the case next Thursday week, 5th March. He therefore asked for a remand until that date, which was granted.

Struck twice by a locomotive, Samuel Kalloway of Avondale, Penn., is alive to tell the story of a remarkable rescue. He was walking along the tracks one night, when he stepped out of the way of one train in front of another. He was hurled forward many feet and lay stunned upon the tracks. The engine hit him a second time, when a man who was walking near the track jumped over the engine and pulled him from the tracks as the train passed. Kalloway escaped with a few bruises.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

THE NURSERY LIGHT.

The lighting of the child's room is a very important matter from a sanitary standpoint and also from one of convenience. If gas is the illuminant it should never be left lighted longer than is absolutely necessary. If a night lamp is required, then a little night light is required, then a little night light is a pity that more mothers do not train their children to be accustomed to sleeping in a room without a light. It is much more healthful. Where lamps are in use we far too often see children squinting because the strong lamp light is directly in their faces. Their elders seldom stop to think of this from their superior heights. A light should never be placed so that its rays fall into a child's eyes. One of the most prevalent causes for poor eyesight in young children is this very negligence on the part of their elders to provide shaded lights in rooms where children are sitting or playing.

TWO PAIRS OF STOCKINGS.

A little story, which sounds very much like one of Hans Anderson's, is told of Queen Margherita of Italy and a little Roman girl. One day the queen was walking in one of the suburbs of Rome when she noticed a pleasant looking little girl, and stopped to talk with her. During the conversation her majesty asked the child what she could do in the way of needlework. I can knit stockings, signora, answered the girl. "Do you know who I am?" asked the queen. "Yes, signora, you are the queen of Italy," answered the girl. "I have a pair of stockings and send them to the palace as soon as you have finished them." When the stockings were sent to her, Queen Margherita in return dispatched to her a pair of beautiful rose-colored stockings, one of which was filled with sweets and the other contained money. The next day her majesty received the following note from her little friend: "Signora—Your present has caused me no end of tears. My father grabbed the money, my big brother took all the sweets, and as to the stockings, why, mother put them on herself."

THE PLAIN COAT.

Though the plain, practical coat is less in favor this spring than for many seasons past, yet there is always a certain type of girl who will insist upon wearing this style of garment. And the coat manufacturers have not forgotten her this year. The most fashionable of the plain cloth coats is the three quarter long skirted model. It fits smoothly over the hips, showing to advantage the Venus like form which the girls of fashion are trying to achieve, and which they do not quite so much upon the proper hose supporters and their adjustment as the correct corset. The coat has strapped seams and a distinctly tailored finish. It is equally good style in light tan or gray cloth. Though the coat fastens invisibly down the front, many of the new spring cloth jackets conspicuously display big pearl buttons. A number of the jaunty little box coats will show two rows of pearl buttons down the front and a cluster of three smaller ones on the cuffs.

FRENCH PANCAKES.

French and German pancakes are different from American griddlecakes, and not to be confounded with them. The batter must be very thin, so that it is easily turned. Break up the eggs, perfectly fresh eggs. A large eggbeater is a good utensil to beat them in. Add a heaping tablespoonful of powdered sugar, sifted. Stir in then a cup of cold milk, adding it slowly, and finally mixing the batter well for five minutes, using a heavy eggbeater to stir it. There is no baking powder or soda and cream of tartar in these cakes. They should be a thin, delicate batter and baked for two minutes on one side, says the rule, and then turned over and baked the same time on the other side. As the cakes are baked sprinkle them each with powdered sugar and squeeze fresh lemon juice from a half a cut lemon over them. The rule given makes twelve pancakes each of about two or three large table-spoonfuls of batter.

DOGS THAT DWELL IN LUXURY.

Small dogs now have almost as elaborate costumes as their mistresses. They have trunks, with compartments, the tops of which are laced in ribbon and clasped to hold toilet articles, as well as hat boxes, medicine chests and change their apparel, too, not only with the seasons, but for different hours in the day, and varying social functions. They have sets of coats, knitted, tailor made, etc., buttoned down the back or chest, and ornamented with collar and pockets, in which latter repose lace edged handkerchiefs, Tam O'Shanter and straw hats protect his little canine highness from rain or sun, and rubber boots from the mud and snow. Tooth brushes have lately been added to the list of toilet necessities in dogdom, and every dog of degree has his own special monogram on his dainty possessions.

QUAIN JEWELS.

Men of a certain class sometimes collect gems and jewels for pure delight in their beauty, and not as personal ornaments, and occasionally a woman of discernment is found to have accumulated a collection from similar motives. Such a collection need not necessarily be expensive; it may be begun by the gathering of a few picked bits of agate at 15 cents each, picked up in some wayside geologist's shop. Old family jewelry, broken, out of date and unweareable, will also add to the value and interest of the collection. The value of old-fashioned oval glass necklaces, with a bit of plated hair in it—this piece for old associations' sake; also a broken piece of goldstone found among the trinkets, a tiny Roman mosaic from the same source and an amulet of a saint, which may be of great value. Remnants of old family necklaces, too; coral beads from a forgotten source, two white carnelian beads from a great-uncle's possessions, a handsome carved pearl button from a colonial flowered vest, and a bit of carved Egyptian bone from an ancient uncle's watch guard. Bits of moss agate and jade are inexpensive; little uncut cameos, shell and stone, cost only a trifle if picked up here and there. Sardonyx is not high priced and can be found cut in beautiful mythological designs. Mars, Minerva, Venus, etc. Lapiz lazuli, tiger's eye and cat's eye are others within the reach of most people's pocketbooks, and a bit of amber preserving a bright colored beetle is a distinct treasure. Scarabs in crystal green turquoise of Egyptian glass;

opals polished or in the rough, baroque pearls, a tiny topaz, emerald, ruby, garnet or sapphire can be found by the earnest seeker without visiting the highest priced jeweler's establishments. Often in the most unpromising little shops the greatest treasures are unearthed by the seeker anxious to add one more. Any dainty little box, from a lacquered Japanese box to a carved ivory or cloisonné box, is suitable for such a collection.

THAT OLD SHAKESPEARE QUOTATION.

The tide in the affairs of men, women, boys and girls which leads to fortune, is not always a full sweeping flood or a strong current. Such grand opportunities to acquire wealth and fame do not come to people every hour or so, nor are many favored with the great chance. Generally these tides are more like little streams; the opportunities are small. On Monday night sixty dollars will be given away to the nine young men and women, boys or girls, who have proved themselves the cleverest in getting up fancy, original, humorous and caricaturing costumes at the Grand Ice Masque in Victoria Rink. This is a "trick" which all may take and try their fortune, though the prize may not be a million. Those who are to do the judging will not merely glance over the crowd and select the most conspicuous get-ups, but will carefully examine all the garbs and award the crisp bank notes on merit only. There are nine classes in which money is to be given, handsomest, most original, funniest, best combination, prettiest lady, best political caricature, best child's costume, best impersonation, discretionary prize.

THE CHESAPEAKE AND SHANNON

The Star has been requested to republish the following, which is believed to be the original and correct version of a famous old time song:—

Out of Boston I am told,
 The Chesapeake so bold
 Came to take a British frigate neat
 And handy O!
 All the people of the port
 They came out to see the sport,
 And this music struck up, Yankee,
 Doodle Dandy O!

Now the English frigate's name
 That for the purpose came
 Of taming Yankee courage all so
 Handy O.
 Was the Shannon, Captain Broke,
 All her crew were hearts of oak
 And for fighting were allowed to be
 The dandy O!

The fight had scarce begun
 When from their guns they run,
 Which they had thought to handle
 Very handy O!
 Brave Broke, he waved his sword,
 Crying, Now my lads, aboard,
 And we'll stop their playing Yankee
 Doodle Dandy O!

Now the word had just been roared
 When they all leaped aboard
 And hauled down that frigate's colors
 Quick and handy O!
 Notwithstanding all their brag
 Yet the glorious British flag
 At the prize's mizzen peak it flew so
 Dandy O!

Now here's to all True Blues,
 Both officers and crews,
 Who took that Yankee frigate neat
 And handy O!
 And may't ever prove,
 Both in fighting and in love,
 That the tars of old Britannia are
 The dandy O!

The following is another version of the same:—

The Chesapeake so bold
 Out of Boston, we are told,
 Came to take the little Shannon, neat
 And handy O!
 And the people from the port
 Came down to see the sport,
 With their band playing Yankee
 Doodle Dandy O!

Cho: Yankee doodle, etc.,
 The people from the port,
 Came out to see the sport
 With their band playing, Yankee
 Doodle dandy O!

Before the fight began,
 Said the Yankees with much fun,
 We will lick the little Shannon neat
 And handy O!
 And after that we'll dine,
 Treat our sweet-hearts all to wine
 With the band playing Yankee Doodle
 Dandy O!

Cho: Yankee Doodle etc.
 Brave Broke he waved his sword,
 My hearts of oak we'll board
 Tear down the Yankee's ensign neat
 And handy O!

Notwithstanding all the brag
 Yet the glorious British flag
 On the Yankee's mizzen peak looked
 Quite the dandy O!

Cho: Yankee Doodle etc.
