You may give me the kies of peace,
That never for me
The pain of the heart should cease.
How many go torth in the morning.
That never come home at night,
And hearts have broken,
For hard, words spoken,
That sorrow can never set right.
We have careful thoughts for the strain

That sorrow can ne'er set right.

We have careful thoughts for the stran
And smiles for the sometime guest,
But oft for 'our own'

The bitter tone,
Though we love 'our own' the best.
Ah, lips with the curve impatient,
Ab, brow with that look of scorn,
Twere a cruel fate,
Were the night too late
To undo the work of more,

We rise to meet a heavy blow,

Our souls a sudden bravery fills;
But we endure not always so
The drop by drop of little ills;
We still deplore and still obey
The hard behests of every day.

And even saints of holy fame, Whose souls by faith have overcon Who were amid the cruel flame

The molten crowns of martyrdom, Bore not without complaint alway. The petty pains of every day.

Ah, more than martyr's aureole,
And more than hero's heart of fire,
We need the humble strength of soul
Which daily toils and ills require.
Sweet patience grant us if you may,
And added grace for every day.

ELMERA, Dec. 28.—A young woman, a music teacher of this city, was recently suffering from typhoid fever, and became to all appearance dead. The attending physician pronounced life extinct, and the remains were taken to Hornellsville for burial. At the grave when the coffin lid was removed to allow the friends to take a last look at the remains, the body was found in a state of perspiration and still warm. Measures were at once taken to restore consciousness, but without avail, although signs of life were visible for several hours afterward. I slept in an editor's bed last night,
When no editor chanced to be nigh;
And I thought, as I tumbled that editor's O tritling tasks so often done,
Yet ever to be done anew!
O cares which come with eyery sun,
Morn after morn, the long years throu
We shrink beneath their paltry sway,
The irksome calls of every day.

The restless sense of wasted power,
The tiresome round of little thing
Are hard to bear as hour by hour
Its tedious iteration brings.
Who shall evade or who delay
The small demands of every day? To the Electors OF THE-

GENTLEMEN :- I have received a Requisition signed by upwards of 700 names, requesting me to allow myself to be nominated as a Candidate for the

The new Controverted Election Law which came into force on the 1st day of November, 1873, well certainly, in great degree, prevent the corrupt prac-tices which have hitherto been brought to bear on elections for the Commons, and which have prevailed to an alarming extent throughout the Dominion. I am in favour of still further assimilating the lection law of the Dominion to that of the Parliament of Ontario, at present in CLASSIC GAELIC. - The followin

Neither knew anything of Hebrew, and how the young man was to meet the reverend court without it sorely puzzled them both. At last the siergyman saw his way clear as if by inspiration. "Take your Gaelie Bible," he said, "and when you are asked to read Hebrew, go on reading from it."—
