QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Veterinary.

LAME COLT, ETC.

1. Colt went lame in stifle last winter. Was all right during the summer, but has gone lame in same stifle this winter. There is no enlargement.

2. Colt seemed stupid for a moment. It first leaned forward, then staggered backwards and to one side. He was not in good condition. What was wrong?

G. T.

Ans.—1. Tie up and apply a blister. Details for blistering are given in these columns frequently. Repeat the blister in two weeks, and, if necessary, in four weeks after the second time.

2. It is probable your colt went to sleep when standing, and when he awakened he staggered. The shortness of the trouble indicates this. It is not unusual for horses to sleep when standing, and if suddenly awakened, they sometimes stagger or fall.

BRAIN TROUBLE.

Cow takes fits; starts going backwards in a small circle, falls down, and shakes all over. After a time she rises. She has had three fits. My veterinarian treated her, and she has been all right for two weeks. Will she make a permanent recovery? Would it be advisable to keep her?

H. C.

Ans.—This is brain trouble. It is not possible to say whether she will make a permanent recovery, as it is not possible to say exactly what the trouble in the brain is. If there be a growth upon the brain, she is not likely to recover. If there is simply congestion of the vessels, it is probable she will. Treat her as your veterinarian advises, as he, having seen her, has a better idea of the trouble than we possibly can. It certainly would be safer to fit her for the butcher if she is not in calf. If she is in calf, I suppose you will have to keep her and take chances.

V.

WEAK CATTLE.

I have a pair of oxen that I feed on oat provender and bran. I have driven them some. After standing in the stable for a few days, I took them out and they staggered and appeared weak. I took one out to-day and he commenced to play and fell. They eat fairly well. They cough some, but not a great deal. I think they have distemper.

T. G.

Ans.—The cough indicates tubercular trouble, and, if this be so, nothing can be done. I would advise you to have them examined by a veterinarian. I am inclined to the opinion that they simply lack strength, and would advise good food and tonics. Feed good hay and chopped oats, with a few pulped roots. In changing the food, do so gradually, and increase the grain ration as they become accustomed to it. Take equal parts sulphate of iron, gentian, ginger, and nuxvomica, mix and give each a heaped tablespoonful three times daily. As soon as they are able to walk, give a little exercise every day, increasing the amount daily as they gain strength.

HORSE WITH LITTLE STAMINA

I bought a three-year-old colt last July. The owner said he had been harnessed only once. I have done little with him since I got him, but he looks like a horse that was played out. A little work causes him to fail and look bad. After he defecates, he inverts his rectum like a rose. He eats and drinks well. He has not grown any since I got him. I think he has been sprained some way.

A. M. M.

Ans.—I don't think your colt has been sprained. He is simply a colt without much staying power. Many horses partially invert the rectum after defecating. This habit does not indicate disease. He is still young, and may make a serviceable horse yet. Some colts do not mature as early as others. I would advise you to give him exercise, or a little work every day, and feed well. As he becomes accustomed to work, his muscles and lungs will gain power, but you must be careful for some time, and do not expect him to perform the work of a mature horse. Medicinal treatment is not called for.
