

THE PEOPLE HAVE WON THE FIRST ROUND

EDWIN HARRIS RELEASED

Only to Be Rearrested For Robbery.

Edward Mortimer Held on Charge of Theft; to Be Heard Today.

Edwin Harris, who has been held at the barracks for the past two months as a witness in the Dominion saloon hold-up case, yesterday objected to another adjournment of the case and was granted a release from his voluntary imprisonment by Magistrate Macaulay. But as he is considered too important a witness to be allowed to go before the case is brought to trial he had no sooner obtained his liberty than he was re-arrested on a charge of being implicated in the Dominion hold-up.

In asking for his dismissal he stated that he had been held for two months and that he had consented to the enlargement of the case week by week, but as the case still looked a long way off he wanted his liberty.

The magistrate said he could do nothing more than grant his demand but stated that other steps might be taken to hold him if he refused to allow another enlargement, although that was a matter for the police to give their attention. Sergeant Smith stated that he thought within the next week the party being looked for in connection with the Dominion hold-up would be found and then the case could be proceeded with; but Harris still persisted in his request for release, which was granted by the magistrate.

As Harris started out of the court he was followed by Sergeant Smith and as he passed into the lobby he was formally arrested on a charge of vagrancy and was taken back to the guard room, where he will be held pending trial.

The case of Edward Mortimer was adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, on motion of Attorney Black, counsel for defense. Richard Brown was charged with assault by H. W. S. Burns, and while the complainant was not present to prosecute the case, Richard pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $5 and costs.

LOTS OF FUN AT SAVOY

Where "The Masqueraders" Hold the Boats This Week.

A laughable farce comedy is on the board at the New Savoy this week entitled "The Masqueraders." It is brimming full of fun and ludicrous situations from start to finish, depicting the trials and tribulations of Fenator Hasselback, a German politician from New Jersey. The senator is played by Dick Mauretius in his own inimitable manner, the character of the injured husband being taken by Harry Sedley. Chas. Brown plays "Tragedian Mush" and Chas. Moran the tough from Toughville. Cecil Marion plays sweetly the character of the loving wife and Edith Bates that of Mrs. a la Shakespeare.

In the olio which follows are a number of excellent specialties. Lillie Edgerton is introducing some new and difficult feats on the trapeze, Kate Rockwell is seen in her famous Clarindy cake walk with the pickaninny accompaniment, and Dorothy Campbell sings some of her prettiest ballads. Dollie Mitchell looks more fetching than ever and Ollie Delmar is heard in new songs. Mauretius and Brown are doing a very funny sketch "Ireland vs. Germany." Cecil Marion appears in operatic selections and Sedley & Bates close the olio in a sketch of their own composition. The really excellent show is brought to a close with Nat Goodwin's well known farce "Love and War," in which the entire company appears.

RAILROAD BUILDING

Where Lions and Other Big Game Abound.

What Contractors on Uganda Line Have Experienced—Five Hundred Miles in Jungle.

Probably there is no other stretch of country on earth that could produce so many oddities in the way of queer men and strange beasts as the 500 miles of jungle, wilderness, and mountain which the new Uganda Railway, now nearing completion, will cross on its way from Mombasa to the shore of Lake Victoria Nyanza.

This line would have been finished long ago, if it had not been necessary, every once in a while, for the entire engineering force to drop work and go off on a lion hunt, repel an attack on the part of some savage native tribe, head off an invasion by elephants, or fight the deadly tsetse fly and the no less insatiable "jigger."

Since the work was commenced over thirty men have been killed by these animals, to say nothing of those injured.

Two lions in particular "bagged" so many victims that at one time the whole construction force struck work until the man-eaters were killed. On another occasion an official of the East African Protectorate and a soldier were walking along the line when suddenly a lion pounced upon them from the brush beside the track. The officer hastily ducked and escaped with an ugly scratch, but the beast killed the soldier outright before any attempt could be made to rescue him.

It was not long after this that Ryan, an official of the railroad, was attacked by a lion, which entered the compartment in a railroad carriage where he was sleeping, and in spite of his cries and struggles carried him off bodily into the jungle and there devoured him. While the excitement at the station where this happened was at its height, the cause of it returned, jumped upon the roof of the station where the railway hands were sleeping, and tried to get in by tearing off the corrugated iron sheets. During the night his roars of baffled rage could be heard only too plainly by the scared inmates, and in the morning the iron covering was wet with the blood from the animal's paws. Finding his efforts there fruitless, Leo had crouched for the rest of the night close outside the station door, where he occupied himself by gnawing into small pieces the station's whole stock of red and green signal flags. Only a short time ago another majestic looking beast jumped on the train and was shot in the act.

Perhaps the most awful adventure with a lion that ever happened in Africa took place on the Uganda line. Five native laborers had deserted, and, taking their guns with them, started back towards the coast. One night, while sleeping under a tree, they were set upon by several lions and promptly made the best of their way up into the low-hanging branches. Accordingly the lions sat themselves down under the tree and waited patiently until one by one the miserable men were exhausted or discouraged by weakness and hunger, let go their hold and fell to the ground there to be torn to pieces and eaten. One man only was able to hold out until the lions grew tired of waiting.

Elephant are a great source of trouble to the engineers of the line. More than once they have invaded the ticket office and stripped it bare of both furniture and tickets, or have overthrown embankments erected at great trouble and expense. The line will probably be finished some time in 1903—at present about 300 miles are open for business out of about 500, the passengers being principally porters and British soldiers and officials. The cost of the line has been estimated at £5,000,000.—London Mail.
