THIRST OF A RED MAN

Gets Himself And A Colored Man Into Serious Trouble
--Were Up To-day

The Young Men In Chinese Restaurant Row All Get Off But One

An Indian, named Watson, who claims that he works for Mr. Dutton, of Dutton, and says that he is one of the Pottawatomee tribe, came in to the city on Saturday looking for the coveted firewater, which the laws of the white man say that he shall not have. But where there's a will there's a way, and Big Chief Watson had the will plus a mighty thirst. He didn't get the genuine firewater, but, to borrow the drug clerk's expression, he got "something just as good." A few big hooks of beer put Mr. Watson in a very joyful mood. But alas and alack, Officer Dodson of the city police force, rudely broke in upon the midst of his festivities, and marched him off to the Police Station, where he put in Saturday night and Sunday meditating on the hard way of the transgressor.

Watson at first would not tell who sold him the liquor, but after Chief of Police Holmes had him in the sweat box for awhile the facts all came out, despite the proverbial stoicism of the red man.

As a result, a colored man, named Frank Mayes, appeared before Judge Houston this morning, charged with selling the Indian liquor. Mayes pleaded guilty to getting the Indians a quart of beer. Watson says that he gave Mayes thirty cents to get him three quarts of beer, but he never saw the second or third quarts.

Mayes got the option of a fifty dollar fine, or six months in Central Prison. He took the months, as he said he didn't have the money to pay the fine.

"If possible, I am going to stop this selling of liquor to Indians," said Judge Houston. "There is altogether too much of it in evidence, and I wish we could only get at all the culprits."

"Six young men come into my place, order up meal. Eat me, no pay, then have belly much blig row, bleak feet off my table, bleak my sugar bowl. Bleak some dishac, too."

Such was the complaint, made before Judge Houston, in meek and gentle tones by Jack Sing, proprietor of the Chinese eating house, this morning.

The young men who were charged with making the disturbance were Charles Malvern, Harry Middleton, Will Smith, a young man named Moffatt, and another young man whose name the police have so far been unable to ascertain. Moffatt has left town, and could not be summoned.

Middleton and Smith claimed that they were not any the worse of liquor at the time of the fracas, which took place between two and three o'clock Sunday morning, April 7th. Smith said that Middleton had asked him down to the restaurant, but after they had eaten their meal, Middleton had only settled for his own supper. Smith thought that Middleton had intended to pay for his supper too, as he had asked him down. Smith afterwards paid for himself.

Officers Darr and Desela testified that when they had seen the young men, they all appeared to be a little the worse of liquor. When Officer Darr entered the eating place, tables and dishes were flying around, and two of the young men were scuffling. Malvern was the only one he could catch, and he ran him in. The other two young men told the Judge this morning that Malvern was the cause of all the row. When asked who created the various disturbances complained of they invariably replied, "Charlie did."

"Charlie," apparently did not mind, and acknowledged to the Judge that he had a hand in breaking up some of the Chinaman's property. Wm. Martin and Ernest Turner, who room above the restaurant, testified to hearing an unearthly row in the eating house early on the Sunday morning in question. They said that someone was swearing. Smith and Middleton were dismissed, and Malvern was fined $5 and costs, and half of the damage done to the Chinaman's property.

Judge Houston has since changed his sentence with regard to Mayes, the man who sold the liquor to the Indian. Mayes has been remanded in order to give him a chance to pay his fine.
