CHANGING THE PILOT

der the Shadow of the Iron Chan

Chancellor Von Buelow's exit from of fice is attended by mitigating circumstances. In the recognition of the great and the sympathy of all there is balm for his wounded ambition. The fourth Chancellor of the German Empire had not the Titan mature of his illustrious predecessor, the founder of the great office. His exit from it is not marked by the upheaval that attended that of Bismarck. They call him 'the philosopher.' He will accept his fate with philosophical resignation.

Since Bismarck, Buelow is the great est man who has lived and worked in the historic house in the Wilhelmstrasse, where still rests the shadow of the Iron Chancellor, inviting to comparison. Be-elow has often placed himself within this shadow; more often, perhaps, than was good for him, assuming himself the position of challenger. Now he has gone his way, and still the world marches on; new days, new ways. Nine years has Buelow worked with the Kaiser. If he has not always measured upto the full mark of the responsibilities of his high office, it must be remembered that had alwars to adapt himself to the arbitrary nature of William II.

In accepting the Chancellor's resignation the Kaiser expressed full recognition and sympathy. The decision was brought to a head by the defeat in Parlimment, and this suggests the idea of an ethanced influence of the Parliament, but Buelow's service was nearing its natural end before his financial policy.

tion and sympathy. The decision was brought to a head by the defeat in Parliament, and this suggests the idea of an enhanced influence of the Parliament, but Buclow's service was nearing its natural end before his financial policy failed in the Reichstag.

The labors of the fourth Chancellor of the German Empire was not titanic, and there is nothing tragic in his departure; but not every era requires heroic decision and a "man of blood and iron." What Buclow planned and began with conscientious, quiet work will be carried to completion by his successor; Buclow himself recommended to the Kaiser his former deputy. Von Bethmann is known as a quiet, industrious worker, as a keen observer and an impartial judge of conditions. He is the first Chancellor who comes from executive circles. He will have to familiarize himsel fwith many details. The foreign policy of Germany is fixed. There is no ned for experiment or "bluffing." In the domestic politics of the empire Herr von Bethmann is a thome. His main endeavor will be to order these affairs, in which Prince Buclow, the diplomat, was to the last a stranger.

As the vessels of the transatlantic fleet grow in size their cost advances in the same ratio. Thus the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, 1897, cost a little over $2,500,000; the Oceanic, 1899, $3.50,000. and the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, 1897, cost a little over $2,500,000, the Deutschland, 1900, $3.50,000. and the Kaiser Wilhelm H. 1903. $4,000,000, while the estimated cost of the Mauretania is $6,750,000.

In sympathy with the world-wide decline of business, the traffic of the Suez Canni fell to 3,735 vessels last year, a decline of 472, as compared with the previous year.

COOKING IN THE HEAT

For the balance of this summer over a red hot stove will be relished by very few housewives.

And very few would do it if they knew the comfort, the time and the money to be saved by the use of a 1909 Artificial Gas Range.

It is right up-to-date, is very economical and very substantial.

For this week only the price has been dropped to Phone 89 to-day. Our representative will call at YOUR home.

what? Now, feel the springs and tell me what you think of them. Know what that material cost a yard that they upholstered with? Seven dollars and a half wholesale. I didn't ask, but Recksie told me that's what it cost him. I gave Recksie the order. I told him to come down and look at the plans of the house and get the dimensions of the rooms, and then go shead and make the right kind of furniture. Well, he came down, and when he'd got through he says: Now, what figure do you want to go on?

"I don't care a continental hang what the figure is,' I says. I want it done right and according to Hoyle. You know what that is, I guess. I don't pretend to. All you've got to do is to do the thing up brown, and if you do it there won't be any kick about the price. You know me. I ain't a cheap man.

"Well, I think he done it up brown. I mess you won't find a better furnished house anywhere, much. Them bedroom sets in the servants' rooms cost me a hundred and fifty apiece and that bird's-eye maple in your room set me back $500. I believe in having thing good.

"Everything looks all right, so far as I can see," said the old friend.

The self-made man snorted. "All right!" he said. "Well, I guess yes. I guess it ought to. Look at them pictures. Look at that one right there. I handed over $2,000 for it. Maybe I could have got it for less if I had haggled over it. I didn't, though. I says. What's your price? "You can have it for $2,000 he says. "All right I says. "It's my picture. Then I pulled out my fountain pen and wrote him a cheque for it right there. I bet if I had said 'I'll give you $000 clean cold cash for it he'd have jumped at it but if I take a fancy to anything I'm willing to pay for it. I can afford to. There's some I've got cost me than a half a dozen pictures in your outif that I'd give room."

The self-made man looked injured. "I don't know much about art myself, but I know that hill get food the reade when the side, but there sin't now the house room, either, he said. "There ain't a rug in the house had in the

PLASTIC SLATE.

Plastic slate, that is to say, mouldable slate, is a mixture formed by combining about one part of coal tar and four parts of slate dust and is recommended for covering large wounds in trees. This mass must be of about the consistency of a not too thick glasier's putty, so that it can be balled and rolled out in the hand. Slate dust can easily be made by crtshing small pieces of slate. The mass sticks to wood, to metal, to stone, and in fact to everything that is not greasy and closes every opening air tight. Even if applied in a very thin layer, it hardens only on the surface, remains elastic, does not chip off in winter or run in summer. It is excellent as a tightening agent for water pipes, whether of wood, metal or stone, for casks and many kinds of vessels. If the ordinary putty cracks away from the window panes of green-houses and hot frames
