

What I can read the book out and send it to you. I will send it to you as soon as I can. I will send it to you as soon as I can. I will send it to you as soon as I can.

CHAPTER LXVII.

Helen had complained to Arthur, of all people, that she was watched and followed; she even asked him whether that was the way to a reconciliation. Nancy had no high flown notions. She loved money, but it must be got without any paltry dishonesty, and she was not going to denounce her sweetheart, but again she would not marry him, not as long as he differed from her about the meaning of the eight commandment.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

Helen had complained to Arthur, of all people, that she was watched and followed; she even asked him whether that was the way to a reconciliation. Nancy had no high flown notions. She loved money, but it must be got without any paltry dishonesty, and she was not going to denounce her sweetheart, but again she would not marry him, not as long as he differed from her about the meaning of the eight commandment.

CHAPTER LXIX.

Helen had complained to Arthur, of all people, that she was watched and followed; she even asked him whether that was the way to a reconciliation. Nancy had no high flown notions. She loved money, but it must be got without any paltry dishonesty, and she was not going to denounce her sweetheart, but again she would not marry him, not as long as he differed from her about the meaning of the eight commandment.

CHAPTER LXX.

Helen had complained to Arthur, of all people, that she was watched and followed; she even asked him whether that was the way to a reconciliation. Nancy had no high flown notions. She loved money, but it must be got without any paltry dishonesty, and she was not going to denounce her sweetheart, but again she would not marry him, not as long as he differed from her about the meaning of the eight commandment.

CHAPTER LXXI.

Helen had complained to Arthur, of all people, that she was watched and followed; she even asked him whether that was the way to a reconciliation. Nancy had no high flown notions. She loved money, but it must be got without any paltry dishonesty, and she was not going to denounce her sweetheart, but again she would not marry him, not as long as he differed from her about the meaning of the eight commandment.

CHAPTER LXXII.

Helen had complained to Arthur, of all people, that she was watched and followed; she even asked him whether that was the way to a reconciliation. Nancy had no high flown notions. She loved money, but it must be got without any paltry dishonesty, and she was not going to denounce her sweetheart, but again she would not marry him, not as long as he differed from her about the meaning of the eight commandment.

CHAPTER LXXIII.

Helen had complained to Arthur, of all people, that she was watched and followed; she even asked him whether that was the way to a reconciliation. Nancy had no high flown notions. She loved money, but it must be got without any paltry dishonesty, and she was not going to denounce her sweetheart, but again she would not marry him, not as long as he differed from her about the meaning of the eight commandment.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.

We believe the great bulk of the people of this country regard the result of the Whelan trial with satisfaction. As the case went from day to day every detail of evidence pointed to Whelan as the standard-bearer of crime, in cold blood and unprovoked, struck down Thomas D'Arcy McEneaney. He was tried by an impartial jury, defended by the leading mind of the Dominion against the legal fatality, and yet nothing could be done towards breaking a single link in the evidence against him or showing his innocence. His address before sentence was pronounced was one of the poorest affairs in its way we have ever read. A man who is thus standing on the verge of death in a position to impress an audience as can be done in perhaps no other position; and yet that miserable effort Whelan made! Supposing him to be, as he asserted, innocent of the crime of which he was found guilty, what was there in the nature of the circumstances under which he was presenting himself to the jury, that he should have done as he did? Instead of that we have an incoherent mass of verbiage which offers only one distinct idea and that is that he, Whelan, proved his innocence, no doubt under the impression that, if he were innocent, and also could not stand still to point out some flaw in the evidence which would save his neck from the halter. No such flaw will be found, we think, and on the 15th December Whelan will be hurried into the presence where his guilt is clear as noon-day. The interests of humanity and justice demand that the right man should suffer punishment for the murder of McEneaney, and no man can doubt as to the righteousness of the verdict rendered.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

SPLENDID BALL.—On Saturday last, the Grand Ball of the Grand Trunk Ry. Co. was held at the Hotel Windsor. The ball was a grand success, and was attended by a large number of the elite of the city. The music was supplied by the Grand Trunk Orchestra, and the dancing was kept up until a late hour.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.

YESTERDAY MORNING.—(7:17h) Two ladies of the Irish persuasion had a regular fight in the streets. They were both dressed in the latest fashion, and were walking towards the Exhibition. One of them was carrying a large basket on her back, and the other was carrying a large basket on her back. They were both dressed in the latest fashion, and were walking towards the Exhibition.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

SPLENDID BALL.—On Saturday last, the Grand Ball of the Grand Trunk Ry. Co. was held at the Hotel Windsor. The ball was a grand success, and was attended by a large number of the elite of the city. The music was supplied by the Grand Trunk Orchestra, and the dancing was kept up until a late hour.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

YESTERDAY MORNING.—(7:17h) Two ladies of the Irish persuasion had a regular fight in the streets. They were both dressed in the latest fashion, and were walking towards the Exhibition. One of them was carrying a large basket on her back, and the other was carrying a large basket on her back. They were both dressed in the latest fashion, and were walking towards the Exhibition.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—The trial of Whelan for the murder of McEneaney is now in progress. The evidence against him is overwhelming, and he is expected to be found guilty. The trial is being held at the Court House, and is attracting a large number of spectators.

News of the World.

CHILD DESTRUCTION.—On Friday morning the 11th inst., a child was found at the door of the Rev. Mr. Ross of Brucefield, neatly wrapped up in an Indian blanket. The child was about seven months old and dressed in the new show the linen and flannel being of the finest texture. And on a fine linen handkerchief the name 'Charles Green' was marked with indelible ink. The authorities were trying to discover the parents of the child, but as yet no clue has been found of the heathen wretches.

News of the World.

CHILD DESTRUCTION.—On Friday morning the 11th inst., a child was found at the door of the Rev. Mr. Ross of Brucefield, neatly wrapped up in an Indian blanket. The child was about seven months old and dressed in the new show the linen and flannel being of the finest texture. And on a fine linen handkerchief the name 'Charles Green' was marked with indelible ink. The authorities were trying to discover the parents of the child, but as yet no clue has been found of the heathen wretches.

News of the World.

CHILD DESTRUCTION.—On Friday morning the 11th inst., a child was found at the door of the Rev. Mr. Ross of Brucefield, neatly wrapped up in an Indian blanket. The child was about seven months old and dressed in the new show the linen and flannel being of the finest texture. And on a fine linen handkerchief the name 'Charles Green' was marked with indelible ink. The authorities were trying to discover the parents of the child, but as yet no clue has been found of the heathen wretches.

News of the World.

CHILD DESTRUCTION.—On Friday morning the 11th inst., a child was found at the door of the Rev. Mr. Ross of Brucefield, neatly wrapped up in an Indian blanket. The child was about seven months old and dressed in the new show the linen and flannel being of the finest texture. And on a fine linen handkerchief the name 'Charles Green' was marked with indelible ink. The authorities were trying to discover the parents of the child, but as yet no clue has been found of the heathen wretches.

News of the World.

CHILD DESTRUCTION.—On Friday morning the 11th inst., a child was found at the door of the Rev. Mr. Ross of Brucefield, neatly wrapped up in an Indian blanket. The child was about seven months old and dressed in the new show the linen and flannel being of the finest texture. And on a fine linen handkerchief the name 'Charles Green' was marked with indelible ink. The authorities were trying to discover the parents of the child, but as yet no clue has been found of the heathen wretches.

News of the World.

CHILD DESTRUCTION.—On Friday morning the 11th inst., a child was found at the door of the Rev. Mr. Ross of Brucefield, neatly wrapped up in an Indian blanket. The child was about seven months old and dressed in the new show the linen and flannel being of the finest texture. And on a fine linen handkerchief the name 'Charles Green' was marked with indelible ink. The authorities were trying to discover the parents of the child, but as yet no clue has been found of the heathen wretches.

News of the World.

CHILD DESTRUCTION.—On Friday morning the 11th inst., a child was found at the door of the Rev. Mr. Ross of Brucefield, neatly wrapped up in an Indian blanket. The child was about seven months old and dressed in the new show the linen and flannel being of the finest texture. And on a fine linen handkerchief the name 'Charles Green' was marked with indelible ink. The authorities were trying to discover the parents of the child, but as yet no clue has been found of the heathen wretches.

News of the World.

CHILD DESTRUCTION.—On Friday morning the 11th inst., a child was found at the door of the Rev. Mr. Ross of Brucefield, neatly wrapped up in an Indian blanket. The child was about seven months old and dressed in the new show the linen and flannel being of the finest texture. And on a fine linen handkerchief the name 'Charles Green' was marked with indelible ink. The authorities were trying to discover the parents of the child, but as yet no clue has been found of the heathen wretches.