FRENCH STEAMER TORPEDOED.

DIEPPE, To-day. A German submarine torpedoed this morning without warning the French steamer Dinorah, from Havre for Dunkirk, at a point 136 miles off Di-appe. The Dinorah did not sink but was towed into Dieppe. No mention is made of the loss of any of the crew. A plate on the steamer below the water line was stove in by a torpedo. Nevertheless the Dinorah managed to keep afloat by hard pumping.

RUSSIANS SUCCESSFULLY WITHSTANDING ASSAULTS.

PETROGRAD, To-day. German armies are continuing their terrific attacks upon the 300 mile Russian front between Niemen and Vi-ula Rivers, but it is officially claimed here that the troops of Grand Duke Nicholas are successfully withstanding assaults. In the Carpathians, being indications that the Austro-German attacks are weakening, the Russian troops have in turn opened an offensive and have gained a number of successes with their counter-attacks. On the northern frontier Russian reinforcements have been sent to the region of Augustowa and Plock over new military railways, which have been constructed since the war began, and it was asserted here to-day that the armies of Field Marshal von Hindenburg are now confronted by 300,000 fresh Russian troops who will take offensive as soon as the German losses compel him to slacken their attacks. Claims made by the German war office that 84,000 Russians were captured when they retired from East Prussia were branded as absurd by Minister of War Suk-homlinoff, reiterating the claim that the Russians effected their withdrawal from German territory without severe losses either in men or equipment.

How German Threats Have Failed

Now that we have entered upon the period during which Germany threatens to isolate the British Isles by submarine warfare and to starve the British into submission, the opportunity is suitable for recalling other German threats against Britain and how far they have proved effective in some six months and more of warfare. It will be remembered that the "contemptible little" British Army was to be wiped out in the German avalanche which was to overwhelm France and which was to be left as an army of occupation in France and the active army was to have smashed the mobilized Russian Army long before Christmas. The Kaiser did not dine in Paris in the fall, nor did he take his Christmas dinner in St. Petersburg, nor even in Warsaw. Later the Kaiser threatened to hack his way through to Dover and dominate the Straits of Dover, the gigantic Krupp guns. The contemptible little British army has grown into a big and formidable one in France, and his chances of reaching Dover and dominating the Straits are less than they ever were. Again, a considerable German army was to be transported to Britain and the country denuded of its few effective troops, which were to be overwhelmed on the continent, was to be an easy prey to the marauding Huns. Sufficient time has elapsed since the German army was to be organized not only for the continent, but for the British Isles, there was the threat of the Zeppelins which were to work wonders on land and sea. British men of war were to be pulverized by dropping bombs and of war still ride the waters and people still sleep securely in London. The German small steam cruisers were to paralyze British shipping, but British shipping still continues to move, and there are few German cruisers left to harass shipping. The greatest threat of all, however, was that celebrated in advance in every German naval mess, when Germans drank to "Der Taeg" with Britain and would give the German Dreadnoughts an opportunity to dispute the British right over the sea, and reduce the British Navy to impotence. "Der Taeg" has not yet arrived and although the months going by are allowing Britain to increase her Dreadnoughts to such a pitch that within a few months, the Dreadnoughts, added since the commencement of the war will be more formidable than the whole German Navy, still "Der Taeg" is put off, and the German Dreadnoughts are kept secluded at their bases. This true, a squadron of British cruisers ventured from their base and indulged in baby killing at Scarborough and Whitby, but they took good care to flee from danger of pursuing British cruisers. The second raid proved costly to them. Their chief anxiety was to avoid fighting, but they speed away as best they could they lost their best armoured cruiser and had two of their battle cruisers badly smashed. There was also the policy of attrition by which British Dreadnoughts were to be picked off singly and the British Navy reduced by torpedoed and mines to a strength below that of the German Navy. This threat has also signally failed. The Dreadnought strength of the British Navy is far superior absolutely and relatively to that of Germany than it was last August. As this policy has failed, submarine warfare is declared against non-combatants in the British mercantile marine. This mode of warfare was to begin yesterday, and neutral mercantile non-combatants have been told they would have to take their chances. The next few months will show whether there is more in the threat than there has been in the forms of German bluff we have just reviewed. Though some ships, some crews and some passen-
