WAR ON BICYCLES.

Fierce Dogs Being Trained to Attack the Soldier Wheelmen The bicycle is becoming so promin

The French soldiers have become esspecially proficient in bicycle tactics, and seem by nature the best fitted to quickly learn the art of riding. These troops have scurried here and there along the frontier, covering immense distances in quick time without fa tigue. Germany has carefully no these movements, and does not inte to be taken unawares. The milita authorities are training a thousan large dogs to drag bicycle soldiers from their wheels and otherwise annoy them. They are taught to attack only riders dressed up in various military uniforms. Any mistake in assailing a friendly uniform is punished by a severe beating, and the animals soon learn whom to regard as ene-
