"Britain you know, takes most of it.

Here, look at the figures. In 1903 we sent to Great Britain 228,394,482 pounds, to the United States 56,676 pounds and to other countries 648,767 pounds, with a total value of $24,712.943. That figures up a very respectable trade, and yet Canadians and Americans are pro-bably the poorest cheese eaters in the world. Why is it?" CANADA EATS THE CULLED.

Yesterday a reporter man dropped around on some of the local commission houses to find the answer. Summed up, it was to the effect that the people of Canada have not been educated to eat cheese as a food. Inferior cheese has had its ill effects, and all because the home market has had to be largely content with the culls, the more profitable markets abroad getting the good. The farmers last year went into cheesemaking on a huge scale because there was money in it; the result was an overproduction, and a still further result is a feeling of thankfulness that the late spring season will counteract the overproduction to some extent.

There is a movement on foot in the United States to boom the use of it having been pointed out from Washington that cheese constitutes less than half of 1 per cent, of the total food consumed in the United deserves it. States, although this represents 1.6 per cent. of the total protein and 1.6 per cent. of the total fat in the American RAINY RIVER MAN cent, of the total protein and 1.6 per food supply.

Nothing containing rubber is discarded nowadays. The old rubber coat over which the spring tires of a motor car may run on a country road today may some day find a nesting place in the soft tresses of a woman's hair, after having been tranformed into a handsome comb.

Even vulcanized rubber, which, owing to the sulphuric process to which it was subjected, was formerly valueless, is now subjected to a process which rejuvenates it and makes it fit to be worked up again for the purpose of the manufacturer. Im-mense quantities of this product, which formerly was assigned to a rubbish heap, formerly was assigned to a rubbish heap, are now treated and admixed with a certain percentage of new gum, enough to cheapen the price of most rubber goods turned out by the manufacturers today. Old rubber, however, can be used by itself without any addition of fresh gum, the process of treatment being a simple mmissioners Pay a Visit to th Isthmus-Sanitary Work First in Order.

With the Isthmian Canal Commission I reached Colon April 5, after a pleasant and rapid voyage, and landed at that most interesting spot amid a downpour of rain. Fortunately, however, the rain did not last but two days, and the commission to explore the isthmus under comparatively comfortable conditions.

The ancient town of Colon, or Aspinwall, as it was formerly called, is not an attractive place at best, and viewed between the raindrops it does not fill one with a yearning desire to spend the rest of his life there. The first thing you are apt to do, after landing and taking a good look around, is to examine your pocketbook to make sure that your return ticket is still with you. The next, to inquire as to the time the next boat leaves.

The general atmosphere there is depressing. The air is moist and humid, and permeated with the sickening odor arising from the native section
