A Paris Departmental Store Adopts Up-to-Date Ways.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Following the example set by the New York Herald of Paris, copies of which are brought to in the streets in the early afternoon, London by aeroplane every day and sold the Galleries Lafayette, a well-known French department store, which is opening its branch in London on Monday, has announced that not a single frock for its opening was completed before the middle of this week, and some of them will not be finished till Monday morning, when they will be loaded on special aeroplanes and rushed to London for the opening.

Planques Gondon, manager of the Galleries, said not a single gown was designed three weeks ago, but that he will show 6,000 of them Monday. He expects to use aeroplanes exclusively in future, so that showings in London and Paris will be simultaneous.
