Suffice it to say that Mr. Proctor explained that, in his opinion, it was built for three pur-poses: a tomb, a temple, and an observa-tory, and that he dealt more particularly with the last of these purposes. By the way, the great gallery, it is gen-erally supposed, was used as a primitive transit instrument. Has anybody yet dis-covered how the times of the transits were recorded? Were clepsydia then invented? Would they have been of any use if they had been? A farmer living near Bethel recently purchased a couple of goats which gave him considerable trouble. They first de-stroyed his orchard and then ran away. He brought them back and imprisoned them, when one committed suicide. He then shot the other.

Fraser of Manchester employs the follow-ing remarkable language: I am as alive as any of you can be to the critical character of this present time. Great questions, affecting not only the re-lations of the church to the state, but touching the church's own standards of touching the church's own standards of doctrine, and ritual, and discipline, are in agitation everywhere. We are living in the ferment of a new time. The old order the ferment of a new time. The old order changeth. The democratic principle which is making itself felt in the state every year more and more, cannot but affect the church; and as the gospel of Christ has happily kept itself free from all political attachments and even from all month. happily kept itself free from all political attachments, and even from all special so-cial conditions, seeking only to infuse its own pure and noble spirit in all institu-tions and all forms of society with which tions and all forms of society with which it may find itself surrounded, we need not be afraid that the church, it she be free in the spirit and truly taught the mind of Christ, will lose her power of adapting herself to the most novel conditions and changed circumstances of the outward life of men. It was Lord Clarendon's judgment of the clergy that, as a class, they were the slowest of any to diacern the size, they were the slowest of any to as a class, they were the slowest of any to discern the signs of the time, or to deal practically with them when they discerned them. Whether the reproach was ever justly deserved or not, I am sure that now with others it allows acquaintance to ripen is a time i en we have all need to rub our into friendship. eyes and if y to ascertain the tendency of things; and if there be indeed a stream outside ourselvez, which makes for righteous ness, and the old channels, which once sufficed, are too narrow to contain it, we must see whether those channels cannot be widened, lest the stream becomes a flood, and break down all barriers, and the very ideas of order and rule perish in the out-burst of an anarchical fanaticism. From the London Telegraph. No dog is less frivolous-less addicted to anine vanities. Even as puppies they find out their strength and weight, and the nat ural generosity of their character, so amply expressed in the broad deep-set of the fore head, the expression of thoughtful dignity in the eye make them far more tolerant of In the eye make them far more tolerant of trivial affronts, more patient under small provocations than their inferiors in size and sinew. When they grow up they carry themselves admirably in any "scene" with which they may happen to get mixed up. Their presence often suffices to put a stop to a street brawl. The gravity which they upproach the gauss of quarrel, the ponder. to a street brawl. The gravity which they approach the cause of quarrel, the ponder-cus air of judicial impartiality with which they seem to investigate it, are too much for the little dogs of low degree or the vulgar tykes. Such dignity of bearing is intolerable to the canailie. They slink off in various directions overhow and by the in various directions, overpowered by the suavity of the giant's address, the imper-turbable courtesy of his manners. With account of the valuable articles in the room, it being a private house of a wealthy gentleman. They waited as they thought long enough; then rang the beil. A ser-vant answered, and on inquiring where Mr. — was, they were told he had been out some time. "Who was he !" they said. The servant replied, "He is our footman!" The plan unrolled itself; the man had chosen the time, told his fellow-servants that some friends of his were coming, and had put on private clothes for coming, and had put on private clothes for the occasion instead of his usual livery. -Persons of sedentary habits, greater part of whose time is passed at the desk, or in some way bent over daily tasks, cramp the stomach, weaken its nuscles and incur dyspepsia early. Their most reliable and safest medicinal resour is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Disco nedicinal resourc ery, the great blood purifier, and which is especially adapted to indigestion, biliousness, constipation and poverty or impurity of the blood. A Respectable Man. Mr. Carruthers used to relate with much glee that he escorted the great Sir Robert Peel to the battle field of Culloden, and pointed out to him the graves of the Highland warriors who had been slain in that fatal encounter. Seeing a shepherd watching his flocks feeding on the scant herbage of the moor, he stepped aside to inform the man of the he stepped aside to inform the hash of the celebrity of his companion. The information fell upon inattentive ears. "Did you never hear of Sir Robert Peel?" inquired Mr. Carruthers. "Never dud !" (did), replied the shepherd. "Is it possible you never heard of him? He was once prime minister of England.," "Weel!"

replied the shepherd, "he seems to be a very respectable man!"—Charles Mackay in the Gentleman's Magazine. Advice to Sabbath Workers. From the Kingston News. In his sermon last evening the Rev Le Roy Hooker said that a man, rather than work on the Sabbath, should lie down by the roadside and die. Some government officials, telegreph operators, etc., who were present are to day pondering over the rev. gentleman's remarks. -C. R. Hall, Grayville, Ill., says: "I have sold at retail 156 bottles of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, guaranteeing every bottle. I must say I never sold a medicine in my life that gave such universal satisfaction. In my own case, with a badly ilcerated throat, after a physician pencil-ng it for several days to no effect, the Eclectric Oil erred it thoraghly in twenty-four hours, and in threatened croup in my children this winter, it never failed to re-lieve almost immediately."
