It cannot be a business like procedure to call would be a business-like procedure to call enough of both projects to vote intelligent solutions at short notice. The sewerage project and the railway right of way are matters that must be voted on fairly, soner or later, and it seems to us that this unfinished work should be brought before the ratepayers at the earliest possible moment. The ratepayers naturally expect this to be done. The accumulation of such business is a mark of corporate incapacity. The future will have problems of its own, those of the present need attending to in proper season. The sewerage question was trifled with, but there is no expuse for trifling with of the present need attending to in proper season. The sewerage question was trifled with, but there is no excuse for trifling with the railway right of way. It is a matter that calls for early discussion, and we believe the ratepayers are ready to grant to the railway company the limited favors asked for; if not, then their votes will tell another story and the railway people will know what to expect. It is argued that this railway proposition savore of politics, and that any advancement of the project will favorably affect the government of the day in the interested constituency, but this argument will hardly bear scrutiny. The project was launched years before an election was athought of; has been steadily hammered into shape for business rather than political purposes, and at this stage it deserves reasonable recognition.

The Pulp Industry.

There is undoubtedly a great future for the pulp industry in Canada, and its development is now being pushed forward rapidly. Mills of large capacity are springing up in different parts of the country and yet the demand continues to be greater than the supply. In the Maritime Provinces we have stretches of spruce land and all the natural advantages for manufacturing. The prospect is that the industry will be a great source of wealth to us in the not very distant fature.

MRS. GEORGE HOYT. Mrs. George Hoyt, of Weymeuth, qu passed away to rest last Wednesday, after lying unconscious for a week; her own fam during her long residence here will also hold in loving remembrance the memory of her kind words and deeds. Although unobtrusive in character, and domestic in temperament, the influence of her personality was felt and for good, her marked conscientiousness and perfect disposition could not fail to make a deep impression on all who had the pleasure of frequent intercourse with her. Besides two sisters, Mrs. Fraser and Miss Quirk of Bridgetown, the deceased leaves also two brothers, Messrs James and John Quirk, of Bridgetown, and Mr. Tom Quirk, of New York.—Weymouth Free Press.

The death occurred very suddenly yester grocery house in the city. In 1878 Mr. Ben admitted his sons, G. O. and F. G. int to make the big fair pay expenses and the public treasury has each year to meet a big draft inorder that Halifax may reap a harvest from the exhibition visitors. To the city the exhibition is probably worth half a million dollars annually; but this does not make the scheme any more popular with the rest of the province nor does it constitute an argument in favor of its practicability. If the Commission would arrange with New Brunswick for fairs on alternate years they would increase their chances of financial success and the province would, we venture to say, be quite as well satisfied as with the present program. Fair tests have proven the project quite as well satisfied as with the present quite as well satisfied as with the present a somewhat unsatisfactory one to say the least, and it is pertinent to ask the promoters at this time what they propose doing ters at this time what they propose doing the satisfied as with the present quite as well as the promoters at this time what they propose doing the satisfied as with the present quite as well satisfied as with the worst experienced on the Cape Breton coast since the At Forest Glade, Annapolis Co., Oct. 5th, 1900, Mrs. James Cochrane passed peacefully to her reward, aged 70 years.
