AWFUL DISASTER

AT THE SPRING HILL COAL MINE.

An Explosion of Gas Causes Enormous Loss of Life-Terrible Scenes of Suffering.

All night long the work of recovering bodies proceeded, and the entire population seem to have remained around the mouth of the slope all through the dreary hours and the drenching rain witnessing with awe the arrival of every corpse. The tension among the spectators was something awful, and as the bodies of the victims were recognized by their friends the lamentations of women and children that rent the air was and tears rolled down the cheeks of men who never cried before. The loss of life exceeded that of any mining disaster in Canada. The list of the dead and missing, so far as can be learned, is as follows:

About six horses were killed A gang of men saved twelve horses in the pit. Daniel Beaton, a fourteen-yearold hero, bravely risked his own life to save his brother who was budly wounded. He carried him out and got him to the surface. Another little chap named Jarvis had presence of mind enough to get under a slot and cover his face. He escaped with some slight burns.

The present company has had possession of the mine for about six years. It has recently spent a large amount of money in improving the appliances for

WORKING AND VENTILATION.

Only naked lamps were in use up to the The company was also very strict, of the rules and regulations for the prevention of accidents. The collery is owned by the Cumber-land Railway and Coal company, a large proportion of the stock being held in Montreal. Two of the directors, Mr. Robert Cowans and Mr. Huntly Drummond, left Montreal by the first train for the scene of the accident to look after the management of affairs.

A few days ago Lond Dufferin delivered an eloquent lecture on the conspicuous part played by Irishmen in the building up and administration of the British Empire as Governors, Premiers and Ministers of the Crown. Almost every Ministers of the Crown. Almost every Colonial Ministry has a large Irish element in its composition. Look at the latest Government formed in Great Britain. New Zealand is now governed by a Ministry with two Irishmen at its head—the Hen. John Ballance, Premier, Treasurer and Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the Hon. P. A. Buckley, Chief Secretary and Attorney-General. But in Ireland the Government has use only for an large line with the mental state of the execution twelve or fourteen policemen were marched from the barrek and placed outside the jail gate. The only surviving relative he has is a niece in America, who is the inheritor.

The Rev. M. McPholin, of Newry, in a speech at that place on January 23, said: "Our cause is full of hope. who are missing but have not yet been recovered. The dead are still coming out. Searching parties are organized and go under ground every hour.

When the searching party entered the pit immediately after the explosion their progress was greatly retarded by falls of roof and other obstructions and debris on the levels. Two horses pinned in by the losses have been so heavy that a head badly cut and the body covered large additional sum will be required with blood. There was a large hole in misery. About six horses were killed if the fishermen are to be placed the back of the head as if made by the outright. A mule was found on one of the slants with both hind legs blown off.

In a porition in which they can kick of a boot and other marks of viother slants with both hind legs blown off. In county of age and worked for his brother, who Sligo a sum of about £400 or £500 had a farm on the town line about half a more is needed, and there is also a very great necessity for aid in county Galway and other places. We need scarcely dwell on this. The urgency of the case Chapman and another man named Baxwill be evident from the fact that Sir ter, and they spent the evening drinking Thomas Brady has thrown himself heart together. Baxter is said to have left the and soul into the effort to obtain subscriptions while the advisability of supplying that been made, the fisher fold with nets and lines cannot be questioned. Without them they are in peril or starvation.

The Rev. Jeremiah J. Crowley, C.C., of time the property was taken over, the Goleen, was released from the county mine being considered a perfectly safe jail on January 24 after undergoing a one. As a matter of precaution, how-period of seven months' imprisonment ever, the management had lately intro- for alleged "intimidation" of the Rev. duced safety lamps wherever there was dr. The company was also very strict, the remembered, arose out of the eviction indeed, almost severe, in its enforcement of a Protestant tenant named Bayley, for whom a but was erected on the hand of a man named Donovan, opposite Rev. Mr. Hopley's residence. A charge of drunkenness was brought by the police against Donovan, and the Rev. Mr. Hopley was a witness, and the alleged intimidatory language was contained in three speeches delivered by Father Crowicy in Golern chapel-yard, shortly afterwards, with reference to the eviction and the prosecation. There were three police witnesses, and Mr. Cecil Roche, R.M., who presided, sentenced Father Crowiey, for further period of six months as a bail prisoner. Father Crowley is in good health, and is still determined to A shocking suicide is reported from Galway. The chief of police of that place killed himself by shooting with a revolver, owing to the fact that he was seriously charged with having been concerned in the recent rows between the soldiers and the police, in which a number of persons were injured. It is a coincidence of a me interest that the former stated that Father Crowley has been premoted from the curacy of Goleen to the chaplaincy of the Convent of St.

Maria of the Isles. Bartholomew Sullivan, of Ballyheigue, has been hanged in Tralee Jail for the murder of Patrick Flahive at Glenlea, Bally heigue, on August 30, 1886. About half-past 7 on the morning of the execuboys and old women. About five minutes past 8 o'clock the black flag went struggling to the top of the tall pole that was accepted in front of the init and that was erected in front of the jail, and it was then known to those outside that Sullivan had niet his death.

Great excitement prevailed. Colonel Miller, County In-spector Cruice and Inspector Sharpe were in charge of forty police.

Mr. E. Vesey Knox, the Protestant Catholic peasant: "The Itish people, without it partaking of the nature of a heast—of all nations on the face of the earth, the Catholic peasantry of Ireland have the clearest record in this matter; and if there was any nation that was entitled to throw a stone, it was they. Many things have been reft from our people. Cruel laws and cruel Govern ments had taken from the Irish peasants much of the world's goods. They have, unhappily, sometimes taken more; I would not deny that they have, to some extent, deprived him of those economic virtues of thrift and industry; for what was the use of them when all their work and saving went to enrich the Irish hand-lords? But there is one thing which no cruel law has been able to take from our people, and that is the just pride and pleasure the Irish peasant feels in the purity of his humble home."

Count Jacini, a senator who was a colleague of Cavor and Ricasof, in an article in the Neuva Autologia, a leading review, outlines the National Conservative programme as follows: An imaggressive foreign policy, a ministrative decentralization, the territoral question in Rome to be a matter of home policy, independence of the Vatican to be settled by international neurralization of any locality in which the Pope may elect to dwell, the Dreibund not to be renewed unless. Italy ceases to guarantee Germany in the possession of Alsace-Lorraine; and in the event of war between Germany and France, the conflict to be localized, and Austria and Italy to intervene only to prevent the victor from endangering the equilibrium. The article is exciting much attention in political circles.

Night in the Australian Bush. How close darkness trends upon the heels of speeding light in the bush! It was but a moment ago that the westering sun cast long shadows of the gaunt, gray gum trees ever the bure, gray ground; it was but a moment ago that you saw the laughing jackass dart himself down upon the envenomed jackass dart himself down upon the envenomed stake, a shadowy arrow flighting headlong from the treetop where he hides, armed with a long, tancelite heak and feathered of himself. You saw his flight but one moment ago and now it is too dark to see the nervous, balancing flutter of his noiseless wing as he returns with his victim; but you know that he holds the writhing, deadily curse of the land, for you hear the patter, patter of the cold offal as if drips under the crisp, dried leaves and the roots of shredded bark which the tree has shed upon the ground. Then you hear his shrill cry, a crazy laugh, the rancous he, ho! ha, ha! as of some boozy yokel when he sees his brother yokel silp and slide. Thus he laughs from time to time, waking the cockatops to almost human screaming of discontent. How quickly night succeeds day in the bush, where there is no twilight! When last you looked you saw one lone malla on a hilitop stand against the sun's copper disk like a huge tattered umbrella. Look again, and you see the Southern Cross in the deep purple sky. It's on one side now. When the night has half sped its shadowy course you'll see it stand erect the symbol of the faith, and at its foot you'll see the sheen and shimmer of Magellan's clouds and the solemn shade of the black hole where no stars flicker—a youd'n hammesity. The sun has set. End your's days tramp, lonesome traveler on the wallaby track. It is not safe to travel further with not a ray of light to guide you. There is a little water left in this billiabong. You can pick up twigs enough to make a fire; unshing your bluey and do a camp. Throw down your blanket on the ground; it will take no dampness from this baked and thinkly soft mappens to make damper. A shallow hole scooped in the ground; line it with a piece of cloth; springle in your flour and saft in well; nour on your water with an even frickle and mix it with the kneader's virtues of faith and hope. While it still is stiff enough to keep its shape scrape away the bright embers of your fire and put snake, a shadowy acrow flighting headlong from the treetop where he hides, armed with food of thousands of Australian wanderers. The tea is boiling in the billy take it off to cool, sit by the little flame of your fire for cheer, break your damper, sip your tea.

His body is about the size of a fowle; likelegs are long and crooked, with corns upon the toes, and buntons on the knees; his feathers are awy; his needs is long and sender, and two bendy black cyos glisten at the base of a long beak. He comes up close beside you and stands on one leg; then he put the hidden leg down and draws the ridiculous length of the other up about his faccical person. You still do not regard him as he crams his head towards your lace and says; "Hisse-38-38" Faugh, the lift smells had? But do not neglect him, Give him of your damper to cat, stroke his clumsy head. He is the Native Companion, and to you, if you but pet him, he will be this night a fellow most to be desired. Staffyour pipe with blackstrap and light it at a coal; roll yourself in your blanket and sleep, for you must make a start just as soon as ever the sun throws lis first red ray athwart the salt bush plain. Your fire is slinking but you are better off without it. Through the clear air you hear the yelp and how lof the dingo running down a kangaroo. Your lire goes entirely out, for these gum trees do not very long keep a cond allye, and as the last aronate whiff of its light expiring smoke udugles with the last put of your pipe, which has been bubbing and stewing in its bowl for the last firm, bour of melo'y.
