The Torquay Conference will include two sets of meetings under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The first will consist of a third round of multilateral tariff negotiations commencing when the Conference opens. These meetings will follow the pattern of the Geneva (1947) and Ancey (1949) tariff negotiations and are expected to continue for six months.

The second set of meetings will take place under the terms of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade which require CONTRACTING PARTIES to meet from time to time to give effect to certain provisions of the Agreement which involve joint action and, generally, to facilitate the operation and to further the objectives of the Agreement. These meetings opening on November 2, will be the fifth such session of CONTRACTING PARTIES since the negotiation of the General Agreement at Geneva in 1947.
