The assembly Hall of Havergal College was filled to overflowing by the parents of the girls and the friends of the college, who were gathered for the annual prize distribution. The girls, dressed uniformly in white, made a most effective entrance as they marched slowly up the centre aisle and ranged themselves on the raised platform at the end of the hall. After the singing of the school hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past." and prayer offered by Archdeacon Cody, H. Hoyles, the president of the college, spoke a few words to the guests and the girls. Miss Knox's address followed. Miss Knox spoke of the satisfactory results of the year, the growth of the school, and the excellent results gained by the matriculation form last year. Miss Knox dwelt upon the healthy effect of school life and the part that it plays in molding the chareter of the girls. She touched upon girls have put upon the wide education they are receiving, and especially upon the Scripture study which plays such a large part in their school lives. The principal brought her speech to a close by thanking Dr. Hoyles and Mr. Millichamp for their splendid support, and Dr. Cody for his interest and sympathy for the scholars as a whole and for the individual girl. The prizes were girls have put upon the wide education the individual girl. The prizes were then distributed by Dr. Hoyles. Those born today will be clever, but of restless, dissatisfied dispositions and companions. Resources of thought and reflection should be developed in them lest they spend their lives without realizing their own abilities.

HERE is a saying that woman's work is never done. There is no six-o'clock whistle for her. Duties and responsibilities crowd fast breathing time. This is particularly so on washing days, when things must be done properly and in exact order to bring good results.

This is why I think Tuesday is so much better a day for washing than Monday, for then you have time to get your clothes in order, mended and well sorted and properly put to soak. When these things are done carefully

A good washer bears this coming duty in mind when she hangs up the clothes, and straightens them out and pulls them into shape as she pins them on the line. Certainly she will hang the sheets and pillow cases in one place, and the hosiery and underwear together in another, so that the rouble of sorting them out will be lessened when they are dry, much time and strength and never show the work you put on them. There are several good small mangles, suitable for family use, at reasonable prices. Ask to see them when you are in a house-furnishing store again. The clean washed clothes should be folded down as soon as they come
