

Duty to my King, my Country, and my Conscience, to correct the Consequences of my former Errors, as far as I am able to do it. Nor can it be done in a more effectual Manner, than by extending those Lights to you and others, which have undeceived me. I therefore send you, in these Sheets, a Deduction of such Facts, as will open the whole Secret of our m——l Management, as well at Home as Abroad, from the Removal of the Earl of Orford, to this Day.

The two B——s, who had joined, and had long endeavoured to betray that Minister, had, by that Merit (with which the Public were not acquainted in that Time) recommended themselves as Coadjutors to the Opposition: They had played their Parts so well, as to conceal that Fact from the major Part of that Minister's Friends: They secured his ***** upon that Change; under a Supposition, that they were necessary in his Councils to balance the Weight of his new Minister:— They had very early sown too great a Jealousy between the different Parties of the Opposition, by treating separately with them all, that they soon became too strong to be removed by any: And they acted at first with so prudent a Submission to the new Minister, that he was scarce desirous to remove them:— They professed in the C—b—t, the same Zeal to pursue the same Measures, and promised to support them with all the Influence they had: In a Word, they then exercised upon the ****, and upon the new Minister, the same Talents of Imposition and Deceit, as they have since done upon every Individual, who has fallen in their Way; upon every Party, in their Turn; and at length, upon the whole Nation.— By these Means they were suffered to remain in the same Stations, which they held before the Change.

But it was not sufficient for them to stand, in that
