POISON STORY A FAKE SON ENGINEERED COUP

Scattered Poison About Farm to Give Father Reason for Leaving Country.

Provincial Inspector Rogers has brought down a curious tale from Innisfil Township, where he has been on instructions from the attorneygeneral's department.

A complaint was received that a highly respectable farmer there had been subjected to a series of deliberate attempts to poison his stock. A local veterinary surgeon, who had exammed two horses, thought they had died of acute indigestion. The long delay in the placing of the final touches on the assessment for James-street extension, gives promise of coming to an end at least as the city council will this afternoon receive the report of the works committee adverse to any interference with the bylaw as passed last year. The position in which they stand, it has been remarked, is a rather inconsistent one, as when the issue of the extension was before council in July last, both recorded their votes in favor of the 66 foot width. As to the contention that the street railway loops have changed conditions, attention has been drawn by Ald. McGhie and others to the fact that the loops bylaw was passed prior to the one providing for James-street extension, so that members of council in voting for the latter, did so in the light of the knowledge that cars were to be run along Richmond-

SPEAKER ST. JOHN DEAD

Mr. St. John loved children. He knew them and understood them, and they instinctively knew and understood the geniality and simplicity of his nature.

Cariyle pictured Luther as like an Alpine mountain, with its broad base upon the earth, its peak soaring above the clouds, and its great rocky slopes dotted with smilling, flower-decked places, where Nature was only lovely and inviting.

So, too, was Mr. St. John, and with all the cares of office, and the distractions the cares of office, and the distractions the cares of office, and the distractions years later for success. Mr. St. John loved children. He knew.

So, too, was Mr. St. John, and with all the cares of office, and the distractions of a busy life, he found time for 14 years to act as a Sunday school superintendent at the Parkdale Methodist Church. He was one of the founders of the school, which to-day, thanks largely to the late Speaker, is said to be the best equipped Sunday school in Canada and has over 1000 scholars.

Not less sincere than the funeral service which will be held at the Speaker's chambers on Wednesday afternoon, out more affecting in its import, will be the service which the children of Parkdale Sunday school will hold in memory of Mr. St. John, on Tuesday night at the church.

At the public funeral on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, there will be 10 representatives from the board of trustees, 10 representatives from the quarterly board, and 10 representatives from the Sunday school Sympathy for Widow. Much sympathy is felt on every hand for Mrs. St. John and her children. The Speaker leaves a family of four girls and one boy, the youngest of whom is but 4 years old. Mrs. St. John had been in constant attendance at the hospital during the whole time of her husband's illness, and her constancy and quiet fortitude won much admiration. Especial sympathy is felt by those who remember her gladness when it was thought Mr. St. John was certain to recover.
