Here is the Modern Ananias,
A tail, thin man, better known on the St.
Lawrence in the bass season than anywhere, stepped from the steamer one noonrecently at Santa Catalina island, Oalfornia. The boatmen who own the standsalong the shore, and who have a keen eye out for a prosperous-looking visitor with a rod, did not give him a second glauce,
A dark eyed tuna fisher moved up to give the stranger a seat, and then continued his conversation. Some one had just landed with a catch of forty barracudas, and he was discussing it. 2 Weeks Aug. 29 was discussing it.
"But you should see the Florida Dar-racudas. I killed one in Bahama some years ago that measured eighteen feet in diameter." WARD AND ratudas. Talled one in Bahana solve years ago that measured eighteen feet in diameter."

The stranger shifted his seat nervously. "Its teeth were like young bowie knives, and dozens of men are killed by them every year. This one I took on a reak, and when we hooked the fish I began to work on it, and for ten hours I wound and worked, during which that oarracuda towed our boat from Bull Pup key to Punta Gorda, a d's'ance of ten mi.es, where we drally killed it on the beach. It weighed 200 pounds, and its bite was deadly poison."

"That is a remarkable story, said the stranger, who did not seem especially pleased, "but it is nothing to what I have seen in the Gulf of Panama, where the charks are so thick that when you go fishing you have to dynamite the bay to kill them off. But what I was getting at was the story of the first mare of the Mozambique. She came in with flag at half mast, and it seemed that the mate had put after a whale. She was a whaler, and had fired at a big sulphur bottom, the gun harpoon siriking it on the tail, passing directly along the spine, and coming out at the mouth. When the animal was hit it turned around so qu'ckly to see weat had struck it that the harpoon, in coming out of the whale's mouth, struck the unfortunate man and killed him."

The stranger rose and passed on in silence. Princess OPENING NEXT MONDAY EVERY AFTERNOON at 2.15 EVERY at 8.15 Cummings BETTER Stock Company Lange PRESENTING
