

ARBITRATION FOR TELEGRAPHERS

Ottawa, Aug. 24.—The application of the commercial telegraphers of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways for higher wages will be arbitrated before a board of conciliation, it was decided by the Minister of Labor Saturday. Hon. James Murdock announces that boards of arbitration are authorized to settle the disputes between the telegraphers and the two railway companies. Technically such boards are ordered, but it is hoped that the two parties to the dispute will be able to appoint joint representatives to deal with the whole question at one time.

CANADA'S MOUNTAINS.

Eight new mountains have been found and ascended and the remarkable but hitherto unknown Cariboo Range in British Columbia definitely located by Professor Rollin T. Chamberlin, of the University of Chicago Department of Geology, and Allen Carpe, a New York engineer. One of the peaks, yet unnamed, ranks among the highest in the Canadian Northwest. The Cariboo Range, into which the Thompson River disappears, has long been a mystery to geologists and adventurers, and the story of its definite location is one of adventure and daring exploration. In addition to the discovery and ascent of the great glacier peaks, Chamberlin and Carpe have located the headwaters of the Thompson and Canoe rivers, the latter of which follows the Rocky Mountain trench to the Columbia River. They are the first white men ever to note the glacial sources of the two mountain streams. Without guides and disregarding the warnings of native explorers that storms might cut off retreat, Chamberlin and Carpe made eight first ascents of mountains that had never before been set foot upon by man. "From the summit of the highest mountain we looked upon almost unequalled scenery," Professor Chamberlin says. "Higher than any other peak in the territory, with the exception of Mount Robson, we were able to make records that will add to our fundamental knowledge of glacier and mountain structure and the origin of mountains being two of the greatest problems of geology."

"Put one on—the pain is gone"

June, 1923, and three weeks later Edwards, who is a diver, was called to Philadelphia. During his absence Mrs. Edwards became ill while on the street, was taken to a hospital and for ten days was unconscious. In the meantime Edwards returned, found his wife missing, and left the city. When Mrs. Edwards was discharged from the hospital her husband had disappeared. For months she went from city to city in search of him. Coming here she told her story to the newspapers. Pictures of her husband and of herself were published on Sunday. Edwards, who was at the home of his father here saw the photographs and a reunion quickly followed.
