British Securities Have Fallen HER HAIR CAME DOWN. -Outrages Against Christians in Egypt Are Entirely

Religious Fanaticism. LONDON, July 11.—All Europe has been suffering the past week from a fit of political and financial blues. Consols and other financial securities have declined as though some grave international crisis were impending, and responsible statesmen have been indulging in rather gloomy forebodings. The political and financial situation is as a matter of fact, distinctly better than a year ago, and it contains less threatening factors than existed even during them ore obvious crisis of the winter and spring.

(N. Y. Herald.)

Saved by her hair from death in the Harlem River last night, Miss Emma McCall, safe ashore, thanked Frank Smith, of No. 368 127th street, who had dragged her to safety, and then said: "That's the first time I was ever glad to have my hair come down."

winter and spring.

The principal cause of the prevalent pessimism is a wider knowledge estable those threatering conditions which are still prevailing, with which readers of The Mail and Empire's despatches have long been familiar. This is especially true of the pan-islam peril, which has been causing widespread alarm since Sir Edward Grey's speech in the house of commons about the dangerous fanaticism in Egypt. This danger is no greater today than it was when it was fully discussed in these despatches in, the early spring. That it exists there is no question, and Sir Edward Grey dld not exagerate its significance in the speech which has been coming on the dangerous.

GREAT PAN-ISLAM MOVEMENT.

Information which has been coming to the London corespondent for months past from many reliable sources, not only in Egypt, but in all Moslem countries, made it clear that a great pan-Islam movement was in contemplation and might at any moment find expression in the outbreak of a holy war. The latest indications however, seemed to show that this danger was diminishing, or, at least had been postponed. The sultan's courage failed him at the critical moment of the Tabah dat the critical moment of the Tabah dat to gasping.

Her back was toward him and he saw he must let go his hold on the boat to get a grip on her arms, but boat to get a grip on her arms, but boat to get a grip on her arms, but boat to get a grip on her arms, but boat to get a grip on her arms, but then he saw that the combs had fallen from Miss McCall's hair and it was floating behind her. He grasped freeh excuse for entering on a religious crusade in his manoeuvres on the Persian frontier and in Central Arabia, but there is no sign that such a cataclysm is immediately impending.

A FANATICAL OUTBURST. Moreover, it should be distinctly understood that the attitude of the natives in Egypt toward the English is in 76 sense one of revolt against oppression. Even the Moslem mind appression, Even the Moslem mind appression. preciates the wonderful advantages of the English administration of the country. It is simply a fanatical religious outburst. It is a feeling of Islam against the infidel, not of the govlam against the infidel, not of the governerad against the governors.

There are other causes also which in combination have produced the prevailing depression in Europe. The Statist sums up these when it says:

"Much is made of the great increase in high-class securities which has taken place in the past ten years, and is still taking place. That has its effect, no doubt, but in our opinion the effect is greatly exaggerated. If confidence in the peaceful progress of Russia were established it would soon be seen that the stock markets of the whole world would revive surprisingly. the stock markets of the whole world would revive surprisingly.

"Another cause, no doubt, is the failure to provide this country with an adequate sinking fund. A third is the inadequacy of the bank reserves of the United Kingdom. A fourth is the unwise, unscientific banking and currency systems of the United States. All these have their effect, but the effect is small with the condition of Russia, which is the overshadowing fact of the present time."

to expoft their products, the Goverument virtually guaranteeing them against loss.

The shipping prospects are also gloomy. The Nippon Yusan Kaisha (Japan Mail Steamship Company) besides opening new lines in all directions contemplates a systematic campaign to drive British shipping off the Yangtsender of the condition of Russia, which is the overshadowing fact of the present time."

Egypt at this juncture even more heartily than England has supported France in Morocco.
