FILIAL TRIBUTE TO LATE DR. TALMAGE

Memorial Sermon by Rev. Frank DeWitt Ta'mage, D. D.

GREAT DIVINE AS SON SAW HIM

Why the Famous Pulpit Crator Was Different from Other Ministers -- A Hard working, Cheerful, Consecrated Genius Was His.

Entered According to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1992, by Winnam Bany, of To ronto, at the Dep's of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Chicago, April 20.-This morning in the Jefferson Park Presbyterian church the Rev. Frank Talmage, D. Do, delivered a sermon, in which he paid a touching and timely tribute to his late distinguished father. The text was I. Kings xix, 20. "Let me, I pray thee, Riss my father."

Affection's most sacred form of salutation is a kiss. We bow to an acquaintance, we shake hands with a friend, but we press the lip against the lip of one whom we love. This statement is especially time there. statement is especially true when applied to Elisha, the son of Shaphat, who was about to leave home and go forth into the great wide world. Elisha was summoned to carry on the work of Elijah. Already the

The salutation of the kiss is even more sacred when used by one who is standing by the oney casket of a

Many pens are writing eulogies upon the lifework of Rev. T. De Witt Talmage. Perhaps a few words may be welcome from his son. I speak as the having authorities that the statement of the property of one having authority. For over twen ty years I was his constant comrarely left his study until after the Side by side we have seen the light, at the entrance of New York harbor becken us into the Narrows, welcome to us as was the Star of Bethelehen, to the thing settledgener. of Bethlehem to the three astrologers wandering over the sea of sand. But no more will we have sweet companionship. The deputation, which will leave England in August next, will consist of Halley Stewart, J. P., (ex.M. P. for the Spealding division). Edward ly changed to the son who is compelled to let his parent sleep among the flowers and who bears a summons to more strenuous service. Be-fore I start forth anew for my life's work I would, with filial emo-tion, ask a moment for the tribute of personal affection, as Elisha spake to Elijah in reference to Shaphat: for the Spaulding division), Edward, Smith, J. P., of Bewdley, and Rev. J. D. Jones, M. A., B. A., of Bournemouth. The fourth member will prebably be Rev. Alfred Rowland, LL.B., B. A., as expendium of the Congregational Union. It is expected the return will be made to works the end of October.

"Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father. Then I will follow thee." My father was the most original and yet the most natural man I ever Original in the sense that he knew. Original in the sense that he always did everything in a way different from any one else. He wrote differently, he lectured differently, he preached differently. If two persons stood before him at the nuptial altar, his marriage ceremony was unique. It was impossible to compare him to any one else. The mold used for the formation of his character. for the formation of his character was a special one. There has never been another like unto it since he lay in his humble cradle in the Bound Brook farmhouse.

Yet my father was natural in the ense that he never strove to be original and different from every one else. It was in his personality that he was different. He was the same in the home as in the pulpit, on the street as upon the lecture platform, He was the same original and yet natural character when writing one of his children as he was when penning an article for the press. He uttered the message which was given to him as naturally and yet with the dissimilarity that characterizes the notes of the birds of the forest. As the brown winged thrush lifts his treble note when he is awakened by the rising sun, as a goldfinch chir-rups when hopping between the garden rows, as a Baltimore oriole sings when he swings backward and forward upon the tree branch overhangs the brook, each bird is melodious in his own way, yet each singing a different song. He was so different from other men that for many years the American pulpit could not understand him. Under the scrutinizing eye of the theological critic there could be found neretical flaw in his sermons. When he arose to preach, a solemn stillness like the expectant hush of the coming judgment day silenced his auditors. Every eye was focused up-on that tall, straight form and on that tall, straight form and broad, massive brow. Each ear was alert to catch the first word which fell from those wonderful lips.

though the buildings in which preached in our own and other lands were always crowded to hear him, though great multitudes were brought to decision for Christ under his preaching in the Brooklyn Taber-nacle, where he passed the most active years of his life's ministry, yet for years he was a misundersto

With one wave of his hand he swept away all the cobwebs which accumulated around the traditional methods of sermonic oratory With his mighty original personality he broke the shackles of ecclesiastic cal slavery. He proved to the world that the ministers of the twentieth contury could plead with sinners to come to Christ with the energy and enthusiasm and intensity with which the lawyer could plead for the life of a defendant falsely charged with murger. He proved to the religious world that it was not so important what kind of a white linen operating gown the gospel surgeon wore as it was that the nerve of the operator be firm and the hand steady that held the keen, sacred blade with which the condit the cancer of sin. He dispensed with the ministerial gown and hurled from the church the old fashioned pulpit, but the still clung to the old truths. He spoke the gospel message in its simplicity. Because the story was so simply told it was told with originality.

My father was a gospel minister who completely consecrated himself, body and mind and soul, to his work. For thirty-five years his pulpit was the sole business of his life. He lived and breathed and at and slept and walked and nursed his strength only for that. When he went on fecturing tours, it was not to make money or to take pleasure, but to get away from his home tasks so that he could come back refreshed to do more valiant service for Christ. Every family physician who entered our home declared that the rest of railroad travel had been his physical salvation. It forced him to the repose that he would not otherwise allow to himself.

He was a genius, but he developed every one of his ten talents by the hardest kind of mental and physical should be too work. He said, "I dare not lay it down he were for an hour lest the effort to take it up again should be too grash in the same, there was before, though the would in his heart never healed. He always carried as car which was cut by the graveligger's spade. Yes, he had his troubles, but he always maintained a brave heart and made the most out of life by being cherful. My father sets service as early the world him the which he lived in his own home. There was no bottome provided the most out of life the repose that he would not otherwise allow to himself.

He was a genius, but he developed every one of his ten talents by the hardest kind of mental and physical application. No labor for him was too full of dradgery, Morning, noon and night found him in his study. He took physical exercise not for pleasure, but to fit himself for the pulpit. He lived not to eat, but he ate so that he could five. He placed his standard very high, and into every sermon he put his best thought. He used to say to me: 'Frank, do not make the mistake of many literary men. They say to themselves, I will save that thought add nut. It into another speech or article. Give to the world the best you have. Crowd everything in that strengthens an argument, but always strive for quality and not for quantity." When a theological student, I wanted to occupy for some weeks the pulpit of a small country church. He uttered his protest, saying, "You ought to spend at least three months upon your first sermon, writing upon it from six to ten hours a day." What a testimony is this to his own careful work, coming from the cold lips which are now closed in the casket.

What a clarion note it is, summoning all men and women to do their best under all conditions. The lesson is as powerful for the merchant of ten talents as for the elerk of two talents. To him that bath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.

There is, however, a warning that comes from my father's intense application to work which deserves the attention of all those who are bending their physical, mental and spiritual energies to accomplish something in life's struggle. About twenty-five years ago the first danger signal was lifted when insomnia, like a hideous spectre, sat at the foot of his bed and refused to let him sleep. Night after night he would be up four and five times walking the floor. After awhile the children bebending their physical, mental and spiritual energies to accomplish something in life's struggle. About twenty-five years ago the first danger signal was lifted when insomnia, like a hideous spectre, sat at the foot of his bed and refused to let him sleep. Night after night he would be up four and five times walking the floor. After awhile the children because used to it. We would greet him came used to it. We would greet him at breakfast, saying, "Father, how did you sleep?" and when he answered, "Not very well," he would look so fresh and vigorous that we, too, were deceived, and we would hope that he had slept better than he thought he did. But he could not be induced to spare himself. He overestimated his reserve of strength. My father ought to have lived with that magnificent body at least fifteen years longer. Had he economized his strength the best years of his life might have been those last fifteen years. He died from overwork. My father was a gospel minister of unbounded cheerfulness. He believed that there was as much true religion in the smile seen at the wedding of Cana of Galilee as in the sob heard in a house of mourning. He was an optimistic Christian whose mind was optimistic Christian whose mind was free from gloomy presentiments. In his youth he grasped the great truth that God is love. Because God was love he felt that God approved of his being strong and well and happy. He always expected good things to come to him from the Divine Father, as a little child naturally expects good things to come urally expects good things to come to him from an earthly parent. A falling tear may, ere it drops, lodge in the wrinkles of a smile. A rainbow can climb over the dark clouds of storm. If a member of the family was dangerously sick, he was not dismayed, but always felt that she would get well. If financial trouble threatened the home, he never was apprehensive, having unwavering faith that the God who cares for the birds of the air and clothes the lily of the field would feed and clothe of the field would feed and clothe him and those he loved. He was willing to undertake big things because he was walking hand in hand with his Heavenly Father, accompanied by the sweet faced angel of hope. The result was that when trouble did come he was the stronger to meet and bear it. And when greater opportunities of usefulness came than even he expected he was also able to grasp them and compel them to carry him upon their broad shoulders up the towering heights of conspicuous service.

Domestic bereavement fell upon him, and people who saw only his outward cheerfulness had no conception how deeply the iron had entered his soul. When my father was dying, he continually talked about the boy who had been his pride, his eldest son, who is now sleeping by his side as he once sat at his feet He was a noble lad, a brilliant young lawyer. ### POISON-PAINS

Rheumatism is really a poison in the blood, and where there is poison there's disaster in a lesser or greater degree—but there's a cure.

South American Rheumatic Cure neutralizes the acid poison in the blood in a few hours, and hence relieves at once—the complete cure is effected a little more slowly, but surely. When the disease is of only a few years standing, not more than one to three days' time is required to effect a complete cure. When it has been present in the system for 10 or 15 years the acid poison has permeated the flesh and often the marrow of the bones. In such cases, relief is obtained at once, but a cure cannot be secured under two or three weeks.

It is a curious fact that there are certain kinds of noises which attract snakes. For instance, the whirr of the mowing machine, instead of scaring these reptiles, as might be supposed, seems both to allure and enrage them, an'i they almost invariably dart toward it, rearing themselves in front of the machine, which, of course, promptly chops of their heads, fn six months as many as 120 cobras alone have thus been slaughtered on one grass farm in India.
