

workers, and so many departments of Christian work that the students have many opportunities for gaining a practical acquaintance with the various methods pursued, and must receive both stimulus and enrichment from this contact.

The College is not local in character, but is intended to provide for the education of men from and for all parts of the Dominion. The territory is vast and the opportunity ripe. The Great North-West is rapidly filling up with a population of which a great part are members of the Church of England. So far we have failed to provide adequately for the spiritual wants of these people; and not only there, but in the older parts of the Dominion, men of earnest piety and Evangelical principles are greatly needed.

The graduates are working from end to end of the Dominion of Canada and some beyond it, while the demand for them is far in excess of what the College can at present supply.
