Last week the Right Hon. Vincent Massey, at his installation as chancellor of 'the University of Toronto, criticized two weaknesses of the modern university, the curse of bigness and the over-emphasis on vocational courses. Then he cautiously singled out perhaps the greatest shortcoming of the modern university when he said that the "unfit" should not be allowed to clutter college registrations. Speaking further the former Canadian high commissioner in Britain declared, "If modern democracy is to be served, the education of future leaders should surely not be impaired by the presence within a university of those who are not intellectually qualified for its privileges, and whose very numbers make it impossible for others to receive the attenton they deserve." But Vincent Massey went only half-way. The other half of the shortcoming is that many intellectually deserving students have no opportunity of filling those gaps left by the "unfit" students. They just have not the money to pay for their college educations. The biggest requirement for college today seems to be cash-on-the-table and not brains and potential ability. Yes, we have allowances for veterans who want to go to college and we have a few scholarships for bright students coming from high school. But why should a rich country like Canada need to depend on a war, or charity, to educate young people who have the required brains and not the money?

Hi There! right now you're taking hurdles in your stride ...

but the ones ahead are tougher!

Not only tougher! They're sometimes very unexpected! And the man who clears them safely and easily, while others falter, and fail the race, is usually the man who looked ahead . . .

The man who looked ahead in early youth, and charted a life insurance program that would carry him over those unexpected hurdles . . . the man who determined that whatever the future might hold — the responsibility of marriage and children, the misfortune of sickness, accident, or loss of income-he would be prepared to take them in his stride.

To such a man, the Mutual Life representative is a welcome friend-a wise and experienced counsellor who has been specially trained in adapting life insurance to the varied needs, desires, and responsibilities of people of all ages and incomes and in all walks of life.

He is ready to help you now . . . to study your particular circumstances and advise on the type of policy or policy-combinations best suited to your requirements. Make an appointment with him today. Ask him to explain the special features of Mutual low-cost life insurance.

Music Lovers

This annotated list of books on music has been prepared as a guide to those interested in music. All of these books are in the University Library.

In addition to the collection of records at the Art Centre at Alexander College, there are several albums of records in the Library which may be borrowed for playing at the Art Centre upon applying at the Circulation desk. An index of the collection is included in the card catalogue.

Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians is the standard encyclopedia in English, covering the whole field of music from 1450 to the present, with emphasis on English subjects. It contains many good articles by specialists on musical history, theory and practice, instruments, terms, individual compositions, songs, operas, as well as biographies of musicians.

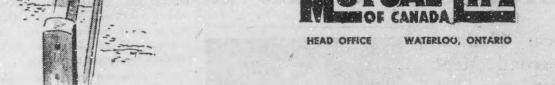

Complete Opera Book by Gustav Kobbe, is one of the most complete of the opera guides, containing over four hundred scores for airs and motives, outlines of stories and critical. comments.

Victor Book of the Opera is another good reference book for those who follow the opera broadcasts. It aims to include "all the standard operas regularly in the repertoire of the Metropolitan Opera Company, an dthe newer operas that seem to be of permanent interest." Illustrations and descriptions of Victor epera records are included.

Opera News, published by the Metropolitan Opera Guild gives items about the cast and productions of the current opera seaosn. This periodical is weekly. The Victor Book of the Symphony

Once upon a time a college paper had an Editorial Assistant who lived up a hill. Now this Editorial Assistant loved to look out on the campus through a very small knot-hoel Day after day he watched the comings and goings of people and soon became familiar with those who came within focus of his knot-hole. Then one day ... he ... stopped and thought, "Each day I see the same familiar faces - many, many people I have rever seen."

So he sat down and wrote an editorial on college spirit.

There is no need for a young man without the necessary finances to waste productive years struggling to get himself through college if he has the necessary mental abilities to be in college at all; nor is there any excuse for brains going to waste in this province, merely for the lack of training.

The University of New Brunswick should be open to any person with the desire and ability to learn. If more room is needed Vincent Massey's "unfit" should not be anlowed to enter. What better investment could the people of New Brunswick make than that of paying fully for the university educator of the "fit" young people of the province? We say that the resulting graduates, working here in an attempt to repay the people of New Brunswick for their education, would disperse the depressing fog that has enveloped the province for the past century.

by Charles O'Connell has become a handbook for all concert, radio and phonograph listeners. The author says his object is "to make good orchestral music more intelligible and therefore more stimulating and enjoyable" by interpreting the spiritual and technical significance of outstanding orchestral selections." Explanations and notes on the orchestra and its instruments are well illustrated, 70 composers discussed with biographies and notes on the best known works of each composer.

From Bach to Stravinsky by David Ewen is a history of music from the 18th century to the present in which each composer is presented by a leading authority on his music and his time.

More informal comments on the musicians and conductors of today may be found in Oscar Levant's Smattering of Ignorance. Discussions on Toscanini, Stokowski, Waiter, Harpo Marx, George Gershwin, Aaron Copeland are presetned in Levant's frank syle. This book has been called by critics "not a searching analysis but an autobiography of a young man in the mill of American music.
