

The root of the water hemlock consists of a bunch of fleshy, tapering projections attached to the rootstock. These fleshy projections spread out in different directions, and vary in number from

FIG. 7. Longitudinal section of a portion of the stem of water hemlock, and of the rootstock showing cross-partitions.