

"In his capacity of spiritual teacher and guide, Mr. Slight has enjoyed peculiarly favourable opportunities of judging of the character of these children of the soil—opportunities which a perusal of his work will satisfy the reader he has not neglected.—Mr. Slight's work does equal credit to his piety and devotedness as a Christian Missionary, and to his intelligence and judgment as an educated gentleman. It is deserving of the patronage of all who feel an interest in the present condition and future prospects of the 'Red Children' of our Common Father."—Montreal Herald.

"We take the earliest opportunity of noticing, and recommending it—which will be, we think, very interesting to many of our readers. Our readers, who recollect the Missionary visits and addresses of those excellent men (P. Jones and J. Sunday), will be glad to have a collected and condensed account of the Indians. We have read the volume with great pleasure, and we are persuaded that it will be a welcome addition to the shelves of the Sunday School Library. Its contents are deeply interesting, and are furnished by one who is evidently well acquainted with his subject, and who writes from personal observation. We can promise our readers a real treat in the perusal."—(London) Youth's Instructor and Guardian.

The author has received many testimonials from private sources. The following are selected:—

"I have examined the work with much pleasure. It contains a great deal of interesting matter, and information, conveyed in very good language, and will be serviceable to the cause of Missions among the Indians. I may here state, that the result of the work of God among the Indians in Michigan in 1841, has been according to our anticipations (see p. 167.) Several other parties have embraced Christianity. There has been a gracious work during the past year which is still going on."—Rev. Wm. Scott.

"I read your work with considerable interest, and am sure that if it finds its way to the proper persons, it will counteract much of the unjust impressions produced by titled authors of Indians and Missions."—Rev. E. Botterell.
