

to whom the author and the Institute are very much indebted for their kindly interest and assistance. Many allotment owners, or their agents, allotment cultivators and small holders not only offered information with regard to their own holdings, but placed time at the disposal of the author to direct attention to other items of interest. Without the assistance, also, of numerous overseers, assistant overseers, and rate collectors, it would have been impossible to obtain some of the information. Thanks are also due to Mr. P. Elford and Mr. S. Heaton, for information on educational work on gardens and allotments, and to Mr. Lester Smith, the county land agent, whose willingness to supply information on many points that arose is greatly appreciated.
