

Sweet Miss Margery

"Why, Margery," he said lightly, "what is the matter? Who has been frightening you?"

"I am nervous about you; you look so worn and ill, Nugent, you must put away those deeds and writings. They distress me."

"You shall not be distressed then, my darling; see—I have put them away at once. But you are mistaken, Margery; I am not ill, only a little tired."

"You are my dear, sweet Margery!" he said, lightly. "But what has caused you this sudden fear, my darling?"

"You have been looking ill for so long! The squire has just spoken to me, and it has frightened me; and, Nugent, I want to ask you something. Will you promise to do it?"

"What can I refuse you, Margery?" "Then let us leave here and go back to the manor—the squire is longing to see our dear old home. You will come, dear?"

"Home!" repeated the earl dreamily, as if the word brought content. Then, with a sudden contraction of his brows, as if from pain, he added, "But it will be lonely for you, my dear one; you will not care for it."

a little sigh, "and I must look on now." Margery did not answer; she was watching her husband. She heard his clear ringing voice directing the men, saw his straight even strokes, and the excitement overcame her dread. It was a novel scene, and one that pleased her, though the sight of the gray dead trunk, the remains of a noble flourishing tree, saddened her somewhat. Pauline covered and shrieked as she heard the great rough mass creak; but Margery never moved; the bustle and vigor of the men roused her spirit—she almost longed to assist. The earl, glancing now and then at the group of watchers, caught the gleam of her eyes, and, smiling, he waved his hand toward the girlish figure that looked so fair and graceful in its white robes against the background of young trees and bushes.

"It was not such a tough job as it looked," observed the squire, as he watched the men throw stout ropes round the great trunk and knot them firmly, preparatory to dragging the tree to earth.

Margery nodded her head absently; she was lost in the excitement of the moment. She saw the earl wave them further back toward the bushes, felt Pauline drew her on one side though her eyes never left her husband's form, and then came a moment of silence. Suddenly a mighty crash sounded in her ears, while a cloud of dust obscured her vision.

"Is it all over?" she asked vaguely, turning to the squire; but her cousin had left her side and was hurrying to the group of men.

"Milady will return," queried Pauline, with a little shudder. "Ah, what terrible noise!"

"I will wait for Lord Court," answered Margery; then, after a little pause—"But, Pauline, what is the matter? Some one is hurt."

"They crowd together—that is all, milady. Shall I go and see?" "No; I will."

Drawing her skirts together, Margery left her retreat and approached the group. As the men looked round and perceived her, she thought they seemed alarmed and pained. She quickened her steps, and then the squire came toward her.

"Lady Court, I want you to help me," he said, gravely, advancing to her. "Go at once, and fetch me brandy, some warm water, a sponge, and some old linen—as quickly as possible, please."

In a moment she had turned and left the room. The squire glanced at the doctor.

"It was to get her away," explained the medical man. "The case is hopeless; I can do nothing. The ribs are terribly crushed, the lungs and heart vitally injured, and there is a severe fracture of the left shoulder and arm. It is only a question of hours now—perhaps minutes; but it will do her good to give her occupation. That tension of her nerves was killing her, poor young creature!"

"I can do no good!" queried the squire, passing a trembling hand across his brow.

"No," answered Dr. Godfrey. "Let me advise you to go to your room; when the change comes you shall know."

The squire went away, feeling now more than ever that he was indeed a weak old man. The doctor was alone and sending over the patient when Margery came back, carrying all that he had asked for. She stood as silent as a statue while he slowly poured a few drops of brandy between the closed lips; then, as a sign of life came once more into the death like face, she gave a sob of thankfulness and sunk upon her knees by the couch.

The earl's eyelids were raised with difficulty, and his dark eyes wandered round slowly till they rested on his wife's face, then the faintest of smiles broke over his countenance, dying away the next instant in a contraction of pain.

"Nugent—Nugent—oh, speak to me!" whispered Margery, wildly, putting her trembling lips to his passive hand, all the goodness, the generosity, the tenderness that this man had lavished upon her coming back to her memory and maddening her.

Dr. Godfrey moistened the earl's lips again; the breath came from the injured chest in short, broken respirations; and then, as dew to a parched flower, as golden light in direst darkness, fell the whisper of her husband's voice on Margery's ears. He looked at the doctor, then said, with difficulty:

FARMER TELLS AN INTERESTING STORY

Whether Sick or Well, in Good Weather or in Stormy, He is Obligated to Work Always.

Market people complain about prices they have to pay for farm produce. They forget that rain or shine, warm or cold, the farmer must keep at it or else the narrow profit, his bare living, will be lost to him.

A well-known Haldimand farmer, Mr. J. P. Pelletier, writes: "For nearly three years I was in poor health. A drenching, robust as a man could be, and wet me to the skin. I got home only to find I was threatened with inflammation of the bowels. I never got over it and felt weak and heavy and my system never worked quite right. But a farmer has to work—and I found myself going down hill with stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Failure seemed to follow everything. I remained wretched and sick until advised to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It is not easy to describe the sort of feeling a sick man gets when he strikes a medicine that he can see is doing him a lot of good. I was overjoyed—Hamilton's Pills put new life into me and everything worked right. Since cured with Dr. Williams' Pills I haven't had a single symptom of stomach, liver or kidney trouble. I am free from headaches, languor and weakness, as strong, robust as a man could be. No better medicine for general family use than Dr. Williams' Pills. They are mild, healthful and certain to cure. Sold in yellow 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhose Co., Kingston, Ont."

chill, and spring was come again; and during all that time Margery had lived weighed down by a burden of anguish and sorrow. Miss Lawson had gone to her at the beginning of her grief, and, discarding all other ties, had given herself up to the old pupil, who clung to her so desperately; and it was the elder woman's one aim to drive the gloom and despondency from the girlish brow, and bring joy and happiness back to the youthful heart.

She knew Margery's secret now. Stuart and she were leagued together; but all through the year, though she had tried again and again, she could not bring the lovers and cousins together. Margery shrank from meeting Stuart—shrank with a heart full of remorse, pain and more gloom. Was it right that she should be glad, happy, when one who had loved her so truly and tenderly lay in the grave forgotten? Once, only once, had she spoken in this subject to Miss Lawson; and, like a wise woman, the governess said nothing, but decided to wait.

"It is but natural, after all. Margery's sensitive, generous spirit has received so terrible a shock, that it has shattered all joy in life at one blow."

So spoke Miss Lawson as she reasoned with Stuart, who hungered for a kind word, a sign, from his early love. He honored her for her fealty to the dead, but he was human, and his heart cried out for peace after so much misery. He had been more than touched by the noble, generous thoughtfulness of the lying man; for, after all was over and the will read, a letter was sent him, and, alone in his chamber, Stuart learned the wish and desire of Nugent, Earl of Court.

Medical Relief by India Railways. The Bengal railway companies have agreed to allow their station masters to be utilized as agents for the sale of quinine. Orders have been issued to supply them with the drug. The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that they will become very useful agents, especially in districts where there are no post offices. A very interesting form of medical relief, by the way, has been inaugurated in Bengal. In twenty-one districts it is the practice to depute medical officers in charge of dispensaries to visit outlying markets and afford any medical aid which is required by the people who assemble there. Colonel Harris states that in this way a large amount of sickness is relieved, and further the dispensary itself becomes widely known. Another excellent plan of reaching the people to which Colonel Harris draws attention is that of floating dispensaries. Every one knows that there are in Bengal many places which are practically only accessible by water. For their benefit floating dispensaries are obviously necessary. It appears there is one such dispensary in the Cuttack district which in three years treated no less than 17,600 patients. In the Burdwan district a floating dispensary works along the Bhagirathi and Khari rivers. One is disposed to agree with Colonel Harris that local funds could hardly be more profitably spent than upon the various forms of itinerant medical relief.—Calcutta Statesman.

WHAT TO DO IF ATTACKED ON THE STREET

(Interview With Captain John J. Halpin, Chicago Detective Bureau.) "Don't get into a quarrel with a man. Mind your own business, and have the best of him.
