Ladies, attention! War? Yes, madening. Needs? Never greater. Thermometer travelling up? Yes, but our soldier boys fight on through heat we know sought of, to save our homes for us. Is our gratitude for and interest in them flagging? Never. Yet there is room for more vigilance in our Sewing Club, which meets every Monday afternoon at the Red Cross rooms, where the temperature is always cool no matter how hot the day is. Will those who can come kindly try and fill the places of those who find it impossible to be present? There is always plenty of yarn on hand for the knitters, and the way for socks, socks, socks does not cease. Let us continue to do all in our power to supply the needs of our brave boys.

Talk about the high prices, you wouldn't think anything had happened if you could see the goods we are showing in Ready-to-Wear in our Basement this week. All bought six months ago, at right prices. We give you the benefit of our buying. J. D. CHAMBERS

Rev. T. C. Mellor, of Kentville, will officiate at both services at St. John's next Sunday. There will be no service at 8 a. m. Mr. Mellor has been appointed rector of Annapolis Royal, the oldest Anglican parish in Canada, and dating from 1710, when this fort and town were captured by Governor Nicholson, of Boston. Mr. Mellor, who has served as rector in Cornwallis for ten years and in Kentville for four years, will be greatly missed from Kings county. A faithful and indefatigable parish clergyman, an earnest and powerful preacher and a helper and leader in every good cause, his place will be hard to fill. Both of his sons volunteered very early for service at the front, and one, a most promising young fellow, was killed in action last year. The good wishes of all Wolfville church people will follow Mr. Mellor to his new sphere of labor.

L. W. SLEEP.

Our Ottawa Letter.

Ottawa, July 26th.—The Military Service Bill is now through Committee of the whole House, and will likely be up for third reading in the Commons on the 24th instant. Every clause was discussed in committee, and several of them were amended to meet the suggestions of members on both sides of the House. As finally passed in Committee Thursday night there were not very many alterations; and having regard to the tremendous rumpus raised in the debate on second reading—it is remarkable that when the Bill was settled clause by clause there was not much difference of opinion in the House. The clauses, practically, all passed with unanimous voice.

On the third reading it is expected that amendments will be again moved by the irreconcilable opponents of compulsory service, so as to put themselves on record again at that stage. It will then go to the Senate where the debate will not be very long.

On Tuesday Sir Robert Borden moved his resolution about the extension of the parliamentary term. Last year it will be remembered the extension until October, 1917, was passed without a dissenting voice in the Commons or Senate. Every person, Liberal and Conservative, wanted to win the war. But this year a change has come over Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his principal purpose now is to win the elections. He puts the war in the place of second importance.

When Sir Robert spoke on Tuesday he told the House that in his opinion the reasons for extending the term are stronger this year than they were in 1916. We have now twice as many men overseas, the war is just as uncertain and the demands for united and energetic action are infinitely more compelling than they were twelve months ago.

But, he said, the government would not take one step about extending the term if parliament did not vote unanimously for extension. The government had no fear about going to the country, but at the same time he was convinced that general elections would paralyze our efforts at a most critical stage.

Sir Wilfrid did not at once speak, but left it to Mr. Graham to move an amendment about conscription of wealth—a resolution which plainly showed on its face that it was simply drawn up to serve as an election cry.

Sir George Foster replied to Mr. Graham, and showed up the utter hollowness of the resolution. It did not suggest one practical means of applying a useful remedy; and Sir George completely spiked Mr. Graham's gun by telling him and the House that the government intend this season to bring down a bill to impose an income tax.

All of the conscientious Liberals excepting Champagne and Clark voted for Graham's amendment.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier then made a stump speech—an opener of the campaign against extension—in which he got down to the common level of electioneering. Among other things he talked about the Ross rifle and sought to blame the Borden government for the impement that he brought to life, and in respect to which he poured out millions of dollars of public money.

Sir Sam Hughes did not let him off without heckling, and in the end Sir Wilfrid had to confess that the Ross rifle was a better rifle than the English rifle. All of his campaign attack went up in smoke when he made this acknowledgment, which will be found in Hansard, page 3643.

'Sir Wilfrid Laurier—I said I believed the hon. gentleman was right. I believe the Ross rifle was the better of the two.'

He still went on to try and fix the blame on Borden; but his clear and unequivocal confession of the good quality of the Ross rifle, broke to pieces claims of arguments which he and his followers heretofore put on Hansard.

Dr. Michael Clark, Red Deer—a win the war Liberal—delivered one of the most telling criticisms of Laurier's insincerity and double-faced action ever heard in parliament. It was unanswerable. He referred in biting language to the right about face which Sir Wilfrid is making; and challenged him to deny that his present attitude is not prompted by his desire for the sweets of office.

General elections, Dr. Clark pointed out, would paralyze Canada's war work, not only in government administration, but in Patriotic fund, Red Cross and other activities. There could not be effective and united action with the rancour of elections dividing the people into opposing camps.

Strange to say, Sir Wilfrid's stand was supported by all but five of the Conscientious Liberals. There will, therefore, be elections this year. The country will be rent from end to end. There will be discord and strife. Canada's duty in the war will be delayed; perhaps halted. Meantime the Germans will go on, and be encouraged by our dissensions. German gold will find its way into Canada to help Laurier because Laurier is helping Germany. All of these conditions will be brought about so that Laurier may

You cannot pull the wool over the eyes of the modern housewife. She knows or soon finds out the quality of what she buys. In former times many fraudulent articles were advertised in the belief that people liked to be fooled. Nowadays, to make advertising pay, there must be repeat sales and established confidence. That means the article advertised must be worth the price asked.

He given another chance to win the elections. Do not forget, when the election strife paralyzes our efforts to uphold the Canadian boys in the trenches, that Laurier is the man who brings that evil condition upon us and them; and that he is the man who puts party-baiting strategy to gratify his lust for power.
