HICKSON MILL DESTROYED BY FIRE

The property known as the Hickson mill was burned to the ground last Tuesday afternoon. The fire was first noticed at about 4 p.m. and had reached such proportions that its loss was inevitable. A strong south-west wind was blowing off the town, at the time, and the building, which was perfectly dry and well saturated with oil soon fell an easy prey to the flames. The Fire Department responded promptly and soon had several lines of hose playing on the blaze.

The Hickson mill was more than fifty years old. It was first owned by Hamilton and Fish and about thirty years ago it was taken over by the late W.A. Hickson and James Robinson. It had not been in use for the last six or seven years.

The fire destroyed the mill and the machinery, also about 250,000 ft of sawn lumber owned by James Robinson, and about 100 cords of pulpwood owned by A.R. Voyer. In addition, the deep water wharf of the C.N.R. was badly burned.

The freezer and store house of T.W. Crocker & Co. was in danger but through the efforts of the Fire Department was saved.

South Nelson Man's Hand is Amputated

John McCarthy of South Nelson was the victim of a serious accident while at work around his home on Thursday. McCarthy had a crew of men with a gasoline woodcutter at work sawing up his winter's wood and was assisting them in putting a large stick on the cutter when he slipped, his left hand coming in contact with the saw, every finger on the hand was severed and it was so badly mangled that the hand had to be amputated.

SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVITIES

Most of the last week was devoted by local Sunday Schools to their annual picnics. That of the scholars of St. Andrew's was to be held on Wednesday, but unfavorable weather postponed it to Thursday. The scholars of the Methodist Church Sunday School, also finding Wednesday unfavorable for outdoor pleasure, celebrated at home on their own church premises, and had a real good time. Friday, the scholars from St. James' Presbyterian Sunday School had a good day at Wilson's Point and the good work of the week, finished on Saturday by a sale of home cooking in the vestry of the Methodist Church.

Wilson's Point, where the Church of England and the Presbyterian picnics were held, is a favorite spot for such occasions and they had glorious weather both days adding much to their splendid success. The Rector of St. Andrew's was with his people, untiring in his efforts all day long to make happiness reign, and the Minister of St. James' had his flock around him, entering into the full enjoyment of the day. Lots of good things were provided to satisfy the hungry and the thirsty at all the picnics. The spirit of enjoyment good nature and fun held sway and the merry laughter of the boys and girls added music to the day. From tiny tot to ripe old age—past 80—all were delighted. Races and other sports among the scholars caused much rivalry and amusement. The ladies, mothers, sisters, daughters, friends were unsparing in their efforts to help and serve, and when shades of evening arrived, all went ed homeward well pleased with the day, which was spent so happily. What a grand thing it would be if all the children of the Sunday Schools would unite and make one glorious Picnic Day.

MARGARET WILSON AT OPERA HOUSE WED SEPT. 12

To occupy stellar roles on the screen would seem to be sufficient honor for any actress, but Miss Margery Wilson who will be in Newcastle on Wednesday, Sept. 12, on an automobile tour, was not satisfied with premier honors in acting and has turned her attention and talent to the production of pictures of which she writes the scenarios, directs the action and plays the part, then, with a keen business ability, marketing her own productions.

Miss Wilson, who made her debut in the pictures, as the little girl who played the part of Brown Eyed, the Huguenot maid, in the third episode of "Intolerance" David Griffith's masterpiece of a few years ago, has had a very successful career since that auspicious start, playing opposite Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Ray, William S. Hart and other stars of the first magnitude. Against the advice of her friends, she decided to make her pictures to suit herself, believing that she understood the clean demands of the public for photoplays of a high order. Accordingly, she developed her own plot, writing the scenario and gathering her own company, produced her first picture, "Insinuation." Miss Wilson has personally appeared at many of the theatres where it has played and according to members of her party she has always delighted her audiences.

She will be in Newcastle on Wednesday, September 12th, and will face the local movie fans at the Opera House. This is the first time Newcastle has ever been favored by a visit of one of the motion picture stars and a large number will be present to greet her.

Accompanying Miss Wilson are Mrs. A.B. Chandler, Randolph Vermont, widow of the founder of the Postal Telegraph Co., and Pierre Tartou, an eminent French artist who is engaged in painting a portrait of the actress. Miss Wilson and Mr. Tartou have been spending the summer at Mrs. Chandler's home in the Green Mountains and having heard of the beauties of the Maritimes, took the opportunity of motoring to the provinces by the sea.

Mr. Tartou is recognized as one of the most brilliant portrait painters of the present American school having painted, among other prominent men His Eminence, Cardinal Earley, Admiral Will Sims, Major General John F. O'Ryan, Ysare, the famous violinist, and others whose names are universally known in business, diplomacy and society. He is a close friend of Col. James W. Woods, of the Governor-General's Footguards, Ottawa, and on the present tour, the party spent several days at Col. Wood's summer home, Riviere du Loup, Quebec.

Optimistic oratory by Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, ace of the American aviation forces in the war, and by Sir William Letts, eminent British automobile man, featured the Canadian National Exhibition luncheon in Toronto.

Captain Rickenbacker declared that the English-speaking peoples of the world should be a unit in lifting up not only individuals but nations from the chaos of the present and pictured the coming of great military heroes who would not be military heroes but helpers of their fellow men.

Sir William prophesied that Britain would weather her storms and was confident that there could be no serious conflict with France.
