ing to reports reaching this city. They Working Over Asparagus and Rhubarb Beds.

The handling of asparagus and rhubarb beds in the spring of the year is largely dependent on the situation of them and the time that the the fall and spring.

Where properly handled the as-paragus beds in the fall of the year should have had all tops removed and burned and the soil ploughed over the top of the row so that a furrow would be left to remove the water

In the spring of the year the asparagus bed, if ploughed in the fall, should be ploughed back and then given a thorough disking so that the soil would warm up quickly, espe-cially around the crown of the plant. After this cultivation should be practiced until the 1st of July when cutting should cease and the bed receive a heavy coating of good manure and a considerable quantity of commercial fertilizen. Rhubarb beds in the fall of the year should be manured heavily with well-rotted manure after the tops have been removed. Rhubarb beds in the spring of the ear are generally given a cultivation and much of the rougher manure carried from the roots of the plants and the crown. This permits the warming up of the soll and consequent early growth.-A. H. McLen-nan, Vegetable Specialist.

Clover Seed and Hay Crop. A crop of seed and of hay can be made from the second crop of clover just as well as only one crop, according to the experience of a Pennsyl-vania farmer. In his practice the crop is cut when most of the heads are filled and brown. It is then cured in the usual way for hay and when good and dry the hullers will get out all the seed as well as if the stalks were dead and weatherbeaten. The resulting hay, while not of the best quality, is very good and the cattle will eat it even to the last bit.
