To the Editor of The Signal. I was very glad to see in looking over your local columns, that you had called the attention of the Council to a needed reform in the matter of the town adopting a systematic method of shade tree planting, which ought to commend itself to everybody. Let any one who takes the least interest in the question take a walk around the town, and view the different streets, and see how many there are which are almost bare of trees of any description whatever, streets which one would imagine would be filled up by private enterprise. Goderich is famed for its beautiful, wide streets and there is hardly a single one. streets and there is hardly a single one, but what might be converted into a beautiful avenue by the aid of shade trees. What would Euclid avenue in Cleveland be, were it not for its beautiful shade trees? and if a beginning had never been made on that magnificent street by planting trees it never would have become the charming place that it is. And the same in regard to every other avenue in cities. Supposing Elgin street had been planted seven or eight years ago, with elm trees from one end to the other, what a lovely remue it would be today; and it could have been done then just as easily as now, and now, just as easy as ten years hence. The experiment has been tried on East and West street and the square with splendid results. What earthly reason is there that it should stop there! It is almost a sin that a town like Goderich, with most a sin that a town like Goderich, with so many natural advantages, and which could so easily be beautified a hundred fold by a system of tree planting, is left to the mercy of those only who are willing to plant trees in front of their properties. Where one does this, ten properties.

properties. Where one does this, ten neglect to do so, the consequences being that there is an indiscriminate planting of trees all over town, but no streets except two or three, where there is any attempt at regularity. It is very strange that one hundred dollars can be blown up in the air every lat of July in firepleasure, when the same amount of money invested by the town in a judicious planting of shade trees would confer benefits beyond comparison. Suppose the experiment of buying shade trees was established, instead of voting grants of money for trivial celebration purposes it ought to commend itself to the intelligence of every reasonable man. It is said by granting money for celebration a crowd is sure to come to town, but for how long, only one day. By devoting money for permanently beautifying the town instead, people will be more and more induced to stay with us all summer; and what cheaper way of doing it than by planting trees. Let us display a little common sense, and when we get the trees all planted, we vill never want to go back to the fire works. I could respectfully ask every councillor to wake up to the importance of he digests that builds up and keeps up are strength. Food rich in all the elements of autrition may be taken into the stomach, but if that organ is incapable of assimilating it and passing it on prepared for the next process, it will not nourish and strengthen the eater. In the spring the stomachs of a great many people seem to go on a "strike." There is little appetite, little relish for foed, and yet the demands for strength to laber are increased as the season advances. Resort in many such cases is had to tonics, stimulants, blood-purifiers and nostrums of various sorts, in the hope of betterment, sometimes with apparently good results. These results, however, are often like those attained by applying the lash to a horse whose load is to heavy for him. Under the spur of the whip he may rally his forces and start up and keep up for a time, but the whip has not given him any strength and the spasmodic effort has increased his exhaustion.

There are a variety of causes that produce the lassitude from which so many suffer during this period of the year. In winter our main care is to keep warm, and warmth is often secured at the expense of ventilation. The blood, imperfectly oxygenated, becomes loaded with effete matters (which are deposited along the tissues) and deprived of its normal vitality. When the stimulus of frosty air is withdrawn the whole system droops until it becomes adjusted to they change. The food eaten in the winter is largely of a heat producing character, and one is more liable to overeat in winter than in summer, and overeating with lack of exercise in the open air causes lastitude in the spring. Those who are habitual to the use of tonics and stimulants all the year round are often at a loss, when the first warm weather comes, what to take to spur up their flagging energies. This is the penalty they must pay for the continual use of the goad. There is no food in tonics, no strength. They simply make available such resources of the body as it already contains, and their tendency is always to bankrupt these resources. Those who depend on tea and coffee. quinine, opium, alcohel, tobacco, for strength, grow thin, sallow, nervous and weak. The stomachs of such people lose their power of craving and assimilation of a sufficient supply of food to keep the hady in good condition, and this state of things naturally tends to get worse rather than better. All this is alphabetical, but there are thousands of people who have not learned their abc's in hygiene and need just this kind of innatter what comes in, if more goes out diet. Lettuce, spinach, dandelion, greens radishes, cold slaw, are in demand, and the reason doubtless is that they contain just the salts the body needs for the purification of the blood. By the use of these foods and of the cereals and the lighter fish and flesh foods the volume of feed can easily be kept up, while rich and heavy meats, pasties and puddings retire into the background. By judicious feeding medicines can be almost entirely eliminated from the necessary family supplies. If all the money put into natent medicines and quack nostrums. which are often worse than useless, wer spent in obtaining suitable food and rest, the health of our people as a nation would be vastly better. Those who have during the winter obeyed the fundamental laws of health will have slight difficulty in adjusting themselves to the changing condition of temperature, and by continued recognition of hygienic and sanitary laws through the coming season they will largely escape the ills of various sorts that lie wait to destroy, "It is not in stars but in ourselves that we are underlings." It is not in the order of Livine Providence that we are weak, sickly and diseased, but because we or our parents have transgressed that order and we are of necessity suffering the penalty of transgression.

"More Trouble May be Expected" If you do not heed the warnings of nature and at once pay attention to the maintainance of your health. How often we see a person put off from day to day the purchase of a medicine which if pro-cured at the outstart of a disease would have remedied it almost immediately. Now if Johnston's Tonic Liver Pills had been taken when the first uneasiness made its appearance the illness would have been "nipped in the bud." Johnson's Tonic Bitters and Liver Pills are decidedly the best medicine on the market for general tonic and invigorating properties. Pills 25c. per bottle. Bitters

During the late Christmas holidays a assistant clerk a young man who was exceedingly cross-eyed.

The especial duty assigned to him was to act as watchman, and prevent the peculation of all sorts of small fancy articles that were lying about the counters for exhibition at that time.

One day a half-grown boy came into the store, and after looking all around, pricing first one thing and then another. mong which were some very nice socks, he finally started to go out of the door.

At this moment the new clerk touched him lightly on the shoulder, and inviting him to come to the back of the store. said to him, politely, "Oblige me by giving me at once the socks that you have in your back pocket."

"How do you know I have any socks in my back pocket?" demanded the boy, "I saw you put them there," said the clerk, very gently.

The boy looked up into the young man's face in utter amazement. "Are you looking at me now?" he asked, earnestly. "Do you see me this very minute?" he asked, still more earnestly

"Of course I do," replied the clerk, "Good Lord, mister !" cried the boy, with a blanching face; "here's your socks." And with a bound he was out the back door, over the fence, and away, having learned a lesson concerning allseeing eyes which it is to hoped he may 1.ever forget. — Lucy Underwood McCann, in Harper's Magazine for May.

During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, dry, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.
