Rumors Are Rife

The "Daily News" adds currency to a rumor which we quote word for word as it appears in its issue of this morning:—

"Rumors have been current the last few days that a change in the leadership of the Opposition is in contemplation, and that a well-known Water Street business man will vacate his seat in the Legislative Council to lead that party at the next election. We give the rumour for what it is worth:—

The wish of the Tory Party that Sir Robert Bond should retire from the leadership of the Opposition is without doubt father to this mighty thought, which has been most assiduously circulated throughout the length and breadth of the land. But the Liberal Party is in no mood to accede to the wishes of the Tories. The Liberal Party is not contemplating a change of leadership, nor is Sir Robert Bond prepared to accede to the desire of the Tory Party to assist them by retiring from the coming contest.

The "Daily News" declares that the rumors are given for what they are worth. We can tell the "Daily News" and the other Tories who are circulating the rumors that they are worth nothing, and we know whereof we speak.

What Sir Robert Bond is contemplating is an early visit to his own district, to be followed later by visits to other districts. Of course, the "Daily News" will not object to a return of the complimentary and will receive complimentary if not effusively, a few bouquets picked from the wild growth of rumors from which it chose the delectable bouquet it presented this morning. We give these rumors to use the word of our contemporary, for what they are worth.

There is a rumor that a split in the Tory ranks as serious as that of 1907 will take place at the next session of the Assembly.

There is a rumor that one of the members of the Executive is wondering whether Bond will take him out of the wet.

There is a rumor that two departmental officers would like to see a continuance of office in the next administration, and that they wonder whether Bond will take them.

There is a rumor that a prominent private member of the Tory party is convinced he cannot retain his seat as a member of the Plene Party, and that he would like to stand for Bond if he were not for the truth of what is voiced abroad. We give them as the "Daily News" gave the rumor about Sir Robert Bond, for what they are worth. We only vouch for the fact that they are rumors brought under our attention.

Strange Man on Topsail Road.

All hopes of finding John W. Green who left his boarding house on Monday, Sept. 2nd, and has not since been heard of, are now being abandoned by his friends and relatives, who are now so distracted over his absence. The affair seems somewhat mysterious. A report, which originated through country people, was going the rounds in the city to-day that a man was seen on the Topsail Road yesterday, and it is alleged, his movements were not in the ordinary way as he was seen lying on the grass for some time. No credence is being given the report although enquiries are being made. The last effort to try and locate the supposed lifeless body of Green will be made on Sunday when a thorough search of the country roads will take place.

McMurdo's Store News.

THURSDAY, Sept. 26, '12. Wyeth's Liquid Rennet is of very high grade, prepared from the freshest clear Rennet of the calf preserved in white wine, and is of exceptional purity and of sweet, pleasant flavor. Of account of its guaranteed purity it is specially suited for making curds, soup and junket for children, as it corrects indigestion and prevents diarrhoea and summer complaints. Every bottle is tested for activity before it leaves Messrs. Wyeth's laboratories. Price, 30c. a bottle.

A very convenient form of Wyeth's Rennet is found in Wyeth's Rennet Tablets, a portable means of carrying rennet when on a journey. It is as useful for all purposes as the Liquid Rennet, and very little more expensive. Price 10c. a tube.

BELFAST, To-day.—A very contented day at Portlough yesterday was remarkable, owing to the display of armed forces. Enormous numbers of Orangemen and Unionists assembled to greet Carson and other unionist leaders. Sir Edward declared they were performing the obsequies of Home Rule. Frederick Smith, M. P., expressed the opinion that the battle was already won. He added the Government even if it has wickedness wholly lacked nerve to order the British army to use coercion in Ulster. The streets of Belfast are being gaily decorated for Saturday.

The Euphrates S. S. Co. performed a kindly act Tuesday evening when they put the Othar at the disposal of the man Scurry. The kind-hearted Capt. Sedgeman soon had his crew collected and rubbed him across to Portlough Cove. Every attention was given the wounded man on the way across. This kindness is characteristic of the captain and the company.

A number of lady and gentlemen friends called on Miss Helen Buckley of Water Street Wednesday night, and gave her a surprise party. She is shortly to be married and the surprise consisted of a "linen shower" which she thanked the donors for. She is to be married next Tuesday night. Her friends were entertained by Miss Buckley and all spent a pleasant night returning home at 1 a.m. to-day.

THE S. S. Fogota left Gander Bay at 10:25 a.m. to-day.

The Sagona on her second trip left Halifax yesterday to call at Sydney. She is bound to St. Pierre, is filled with freight and has 36 passengers on board.

This morning, George Henry, darling son of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Rogers, aged 3 1/2 months. Sane in the arms of Jesus.

The Most Interesting Show Window in Newfoundland!

Where is the most interesting show window in Newfoundland? Not on Water or any other street—nor on any of those articles of trade that run through the city.

Though, to be sure, there are fine big show windows all about this city. But this particular window shows week in, week out, a huge exhibit of all the world's products.

A merchandise display including everything from diamonds to motor cars—from luscious fruits and fragrant flowers to furmacees.

The galleons of Spain never cargood such treasures—for these are the harvests of far-off lands. These are the things moulded in the great mills and industry or craftily turned by the skilled fingers of fond artisans.

You can hold this great show window in your hand—pass it about the family group—pick and choose of its individual wonders as your fancy bids.

And it goes into your home at a time when you have leisure to study its manifold offerings.

Do you fully appreciate the value to you of his great show window? Do you realize that it gathers together, from every quarter of the globe, the best things made by man.

Have you not found that the Evening Telegram's advertising columns save you time and money?

If you have not learned this lesson, look over to-day's advertisements, and profit as thousands of others are doing.

Learn how you can buy nearly everything most economically through these advertisements.

The Evening Telegram can be your shopping agent—can help you buy to best advantage—can double the buying power of nearly every dollar you pay.

But only by reading all the advertisements can you secure the widest choice from the greatest variety.

Why buy haphazard? Why buy of those who do not advertise for your benefit?

It is for your benefit—because merchants who do advertise do the bigger business, employ their shelves of energy, and so have the fresher, newer goods.

Doing a bigger volume of business than the men who do not advertise, they make more profits on individual sales, and your expenses are decreased.

They back up their advertising with their wares, and stand or fall in their lives up to the promises they make in print.

Their stores are bright and brisk and active. Their service is good. Their wares appeal to the intelligent. Merchants who advertise do it for your good as well as their own.

Double the dollar power of your income. By learning true value of Newfoundland's greatest show window—the Evening Telegram.
