Dr. J. D. Logan, in "Songs of the Makers of Canada."

An Empire Leader.

The warmth of the tributes which have been paid to Sir Wilfred Laurier by the Press of Great Britain and the United States testifies to the place he held as a great world figure. The great newspapers of London and New York unite in signalizing the constructive qualities of his statesmanship and his deep-seated loyalty to British ideals. Sir Wilfred Laurier's fame as a Canadian statesman is unchallenged. His renown as an Empire statesman and an international figure is equally secure.

Sir Wilfred Laurier was an Imperialist, in the truest sense of the term. When he first laid down the formula, at a meeting of the Imperial Conference, that the true basis of the British Commonwealth of nations was "local autonomy and Imperial unity," a chorus of protests arose from certain quarters in the Old Country and in Canada, which were seeking to thrust upon the British Commonwealth a system of centralized imperialistic government. But there never was any question in the minds of thoughtful students of constitutional development, that the principle laid down by Sir Wilfred Laurier was not only sound Canadianism but sane Imperialism. His vision on this question as on many others, has been amply vindicated by time. It has stood the test of a great world-shaking war, and has become a cardinal principle of the British Commonwealth. Indeed, it is not too much to say that the stand which Sir Wilfred Laurier, took at the several Imperial Conferences was importantly influential guiding our Imperial development along the British pathway of order ed freedom, broadened down from precedent to precedent."

At the Imperial Conference came iu contact with General Louis Botha, when the Boer Premier o South Africa first took his seat in the Councils of Imperial statesmen after the consummation of the Union, and it is well known that Botha was greatly influenced by Sir Wilfred's speeches and counsel. The splendid success of self-government in South Africa, where Boer and Briton were brought together in a happy union, is one of the glories of British history. Not a little of that success is to be attributed to the association of Botha with Laurier, who, out of his own rich experience in Canada, was able to give counsel and advice which were particularly helpful to South Africa at the beginning of its self-governing career. - Morning Chronicle.

Women Are

Alarm Clocks.

Are women less punctual than men? If we are to believe the jokes constantly being printed about husbands waiting impatiently for their wives to dress for the theater, then of course they are.

But is there any real truth in this view of the case? Despite all jokes to the contrary, women are ready for the theatre before their husbands, or sweethearts, or brothers in nine cases out of ten.

Most women are keen on getting to the theatre early, before the curtain rises. They like to see and be seen before the lights are turned down.

It is the same as regards the ordinary everyday affairs of life. Who is it gets the husband up in the morning and off to business? Who is it wakes the children, sees to their breakfasts, and gets them off to school punctually to time, morning after morning, winter and summer alike? Who but the woman. She is a regular human alarm clock to her household.

In business, too, it is the women who are at the office on time, and frequently ahead of time, while the men, especially after they have been having what they call a "good time" the night previous frequently turns up late, with no heart in them for real work. In short, it is the men, not the women, who are the unpunctual sex, notwithstanding all assertions to the
