Newfoundlanders! Advance!

Such were the words of the order, given on that fateful morning of July 1st, 1916, which sent the first battalion of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment to practical annihilation from the concentrated fire of German field batteries, machine guns and rifles, on the stricken field of Beaumont Hamel. And to the everlasting credit and honor of the regiment and the dominion, not one man shirked the issue. Where others had failed they made the forlorn attempt to succeed at a cost which we know only too well. Mowed down by a storm of projectiles and shells the gallant remnants of Newfoundland's first regiment, pushed their way forward and even forward, in hope of retrieving the misfortunes and losses of the first attack. Into an inferno of shot and explosive they advanced, their one hope being to reach the objective for which their advance was ordered. But human flesh and blood could not prevail against the iron and steel of the German guns, and with three-fourths of the battalion killed and wounded, the remainder had to admit failure, but not dishonor. Demigods could not have done more. The best blood of Newfoundland spilled over the battle field gave proof of the high courage and gallant attributes of the sons of Terra Nova. The dauntless heroism exhibited in pushing home the attack to almost within the enemy lines, was further evidence of the daring and spirit of the wearers of the Caribou badge. Animated by the desire of victory and to show how little they valued life, they kept on in the face of sudden and certain death. The honor of Newfoundland was at stake, and notwithstanding the reverse received at Beaumont Hamel, the men from the land of the fern, were afterwards more feared by the Germans than were any of the other units comprising the Allied forces. The deaths of so many gallant gentlemen have been lamented, in the homes from which they came, in the towns that gave them birth, and in the churches of the dominion. Their memories are held dear by all, and the splendid part of it is that their glory will ever live. They died that the world might be made free for democracy, and the scroll of fame contains no names that will shine more brightly than those who made the Supreme Sacrifice on Saturday, July 1st, 1916. Others after them

"Took up our quarrel with the foe,
And from their falling hands held high the torch,"

and now that for which they fought has been accomplished and peace once more reigns over a world at rest. Those fine souls who sleep under a foreign sod, will wear a smile of contentment to-day because the rights and liberties for which they died have been safeguarded: their militant labors recompensed, for with their spiritual eyes they have seen the passing away of autocracy and the birth of a new age of freedom from despotism.

It is meetly appropriate that at the Memorial Services tomorrow, reference will be made to the signing of the Peace Treaty, and a greater sentiment of elation will be manifest, for that reason. The spirits of the departed fighters will be present at all the celebrations, whether in the dim religious light of the churches or under the blazing glare of the sun, and their influence will be imposed upon all who take part. They rejoice with our rejoicing, and lament over the sorrows of all to whom the anniversary of Beaumont Hamel brings thoughts of dear ones shot-torn and wracked by high explosive, whose bodies are far away over the sea, and upon whom the gaze of parent, brother and sister will never rest. Duty claimed their bodies and they gave them freely and gloriously. Earth holds their mortal remains, but the souls have winged their way to the immortal realms of light, and in the presence of the Omnipotent God they have received that reward for which all humanity yearns.

"Better than the best," they "fought the good fight, they finished the course, they kept the faith."

Their record is contained in the fine tribute which Sir Douglas Haig paid them, and in which also he honors the land which produced the men who made such praise possible.

"Newfoundland may well feel proud of her sons. The heroism and devotion to duty they displayed on the 1st July has never been surpassed. Please convey my deep sympathy, and that of the whole of our armies in France in the loss of the brave officers and men who have fallen for the Empire, and our admiration of their heroic conduct. Their efforts contributed to our success, and their example will live."

We Shall Remember Them.

They sleep beneath no immemorial
yows;
Their resting place no temple arches hem;
No blazoned shaft or graven tablet
woos
Ment to praise—and yet, we shall remember them.

The unforgetting clouds shall drop
The winds in ceaseless lamentation
For God's white Knights are lying on their biers,
Who pledged their service to restore the Grail.

They gave their lives to make the whole world free;
They cared not to what flag they were assigned,
The Starry Banner, Cross, or Fleur-de-lis—
Their sacrifice was made for all mankind.

For them the task is done, the strife
is stilled;
No more shall care disturb, nor zeal condemn;
And when the larger good has been fulfilled,
In coming years we shall remember them.

How can the world their deeds forget?
In France
White crosses everywhere lift pallid hands,
Like silent sentinels with sword and
lanche,
To keep their memory safe for other lands.

What need have they for holy sepulture?
Within the hearts of men is hallowed ground—
A sanctuary Where they rest secure,
And with Love's immortality are crowded.

And far-off voices of the future sing,
"They shall remain in memory's diadem."
And winds of promise still are whispering
That same refrain, "We shall remember them."

Disorderly Watchman Arrested.

On Saturday night the police, going their rounds, were called to Tesser's wharf, and as a result of their visit arrested the watchman on the schooner Klondyke, who was acting in a manner which can only be likened to that of a Bolshevik on the rampage. Resisting arrest, the guardian of the waterfront had to be bound hand and foot with many rattions of small manila rope, and in this trussed-up condition was taken to the police station. He appeared before the Magistrate this morning.

The King's Message.

"The signing of the Treaty of Peace will be received with deep thankfulness throughout the British Empire. This formal act brings to its concluding stages the terrible war which has devastated Europe and distracted the world. It manifests the Victory of the Ideals of Freedom and Liberty, for which we have made untold sacrifices. I share my people's joy and thanksgiving, and earnestly pray that the coming years of Peace may bring to them ever increasing happiness and prosperity."

The official notification of the signature of the Treaty of Peace was received by the Governor at 11 p.m. Saturday, 28th June, 1919.

MR. TILLEY CONTRADICTS STATEMENT IN STAR.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)

GRAND LAKE, To-day.

I wish to contradict the article which appeared in Daily Star of 27th from Curling, evidently written from Grand Lake, stating that two young men Willie and Charlie Tilley, sons of C. W. Tilley, postmaster, Grand Lake, were before the court and convicted of house breaking and larceny brought to prove their guilt. The two young men in question are two small boys, aged ten and twelve but with more brains than the mean contemptible author of that false and malicious article, who wrote to try and blacken my two little boys characters and injure me in my official capacity and was too cowardly to come out under his own signature. No evidence was brought forward to prove the boys guilty. A suspended sentence, without conviction, is practically a dismissed case. I did not pay court charges, and refused absolutely to do so unless my boys were convicted. Unless the Star apologizes for this slanderous statement, I will institute proceedings against that paper for defamation of the character of my children.

O'NEILL—O'NEILL.

At Three thirty p.m., June 18th at St. Benedict's Church, Brooklyn, New York, Miss Teresa M. O'Neill, of Brooklyn, N.Y. was married to Detective Sergeant P. J. O'Neill of St. John's, Newfoundland. Miss Bertha O'Neill, sister of the bridegroom acted as Bridesmaid and Mr. Alphonse O'Neill, brother of the bride as best man. Following the ceremony, the wedding party which consisted only of the relatives of the bride and bridegroom, motored to the Manhattan Hotel New York City, where a supper was served in a private dining room of the Hotel, which was appropriately decorated. After the supper all attended the performance of the Winter Garden Theatre. The honeymoon was spent in Atlantic City, N. J., and upon their return June 21st, a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James O'Neill, 873 Herkimer St., Brooklyn, N. Y. when their relatives and friends welcomed the happy couple, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. A buffet supper was served and musical selections were given by Miss Isabel Graham and Mr. Corbett. Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, and after visiting their parents for a few days will leave for St. John's Nfld., where they will take up their residence on LeMerchant Road.

Robbed of Money.

Peter Barron, employed at the General Hospital, is the poorer to-day for $340.00, this little amount having been borrowed from his pocket by a person yet undiscovered. On Thursday Barron and some others were at work in the early morning, leaving off for breakfast at 8 o'clock. His coat was left hanging in the boiler room, and when he returned and felt in his pockets found the roll, which had been in a wallet, gone. Suspicion was immediately fastened upon a man who had been seen hanging around the boiler room, an ex-prisoner who had, during a term of service in the Pen, been working about the Hospital grounds. Report having been made to the police, search was begun, but the suspect has not yet been located.

The Majestic.

Unassuming Tom Moore acts as though he had been a member of the English nobility all his life in the course of a reel or so of "Just for To-night." Goldwyn's medium of introducing this popular favorite as a full-fledged motion picture star. For a time Moore is but a make-believe nobleman, but none who see "Just for To-night" when it is presented at the Majestic Theatre, to-day, will doubt that this rollicking young Irishman could go on assuming the role as long as his heart and fearlessness dictated. A splendid musical programme has been prepared for Majestic patrons to-night, when Mrs. F. J. King will sing "Rule Britannia" and "The Star Spangled Banner," and another innovation has been created which will both surprise and delight all who attend. Don't miss it.

Celebrating Peace Signing.

News of the actual signing of the Peace Treaty was received in the city yesterday morning at 9 o'clock with considerable joy, and for the remainder of the day formed the principal topic of conversation. The firing of the Signal Hill gun, ringing of all church bells, the blowing of steamers' sirens and the flying of gay bunting, soon told that the fateful document had been signed and ratified, and immediately everybody became joyful and happy. Aboard the Briton and the French cruiser Somme, celebrations took the form of musical treats and during the evening the tars from either paraded the streets singing patriotic airs and generally enjoying themselves. A pyrotechnic display from the Briton was given during the night.

Racial Differences.

The old, old racial differences were revived Saturday night on Queen St. when a number of "colored gentlemen" and a corresponding number of "gentlemen" tried results in a game of catch (and hit) as catch can. The dummies from the sunny regions were more than a match for the citizens, and a swift retirement, quite unpremeditated, was made by the latter. This time it was not the negroes who were at fault.

New Steamer Makes Port.

The new steamer Cerro Gardo, Capt. R. M. French, reached port Saturday evening, bringing a large quantity of flour from Montreal. The Cerro Gardo, which is making her first trip is 265 feet long, 2,223 tons gross and 1,349 net, and has a speed of 19 knots. She carries a crew of 35 all told and has a carrying capacity of 23,000 barrels.

Lost Week's Pay.

Twenty dollars was the cost of an overdose of dope, when, Saturday evening, a laboring man was relieved of his week's stipend. Suspicion was fastened on two companions who had been in the beer shop with him, but both strenuously deny the implication. The police are making enquiries.
