H. G. WELLS writes: July 22nd 1921
"I am glad to take this opportunity to tell you of my complete satisfaction with this machine. It is exactly the typewriter for an author like myself. It is so light and small that it can be taken anywhere, and it is so sound and foolproof that it is always in good condition. I have needed a typewriter for years, but I could not find anything sufficiently portable, hardy, willing and easy, until I discovered Corona."

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

WHAT HE REALLY THINKS.

If a member of your household suddenly went insane and during the period of insanity said all sorts of wild things, would you store those things up in your mind as an index of his true character? Would you then mean more to you than he said while in a normal state?

And yet a young woman wrote me not long ago telling me that she had discovered what her husband really thought of her. He had gotten terribly angry over something and said the most terrible things. Now she knew that all the nice things he had said were just pretense and the other was what he was really thinking all the time.

"Beside Himself."

She seemed determined to take what he said in a moment when he was not himself against what he said in all the months when he was himself.

Of course he wasn't insane but isn't violent anger next door to insanity? We talk of anyone being "beside himself" with anger. Isn't that a recognition of the fact that he steps out of his personality just as an insane person does?

Anger is Controllable.

To be sure, anger is controllable and insanity is not. I hasten to add that for the benefit of those who might try to claim exemption from blame for getting into fits of temper by saying that they were beside themselves and could not help it.

That's not what I'm trying to say at all. They can help getting into that state unless they are insane and need forcible restriction. What I am trying to drive home is this. They are not themselves when they get into that state and what they say is surely not a better index of their feelings and their character than what they say when they are in an ordinary state of mind.

And yet how often we store up things said in such moments as he or she "really thinks!"

A Gadabout.

A woman whom I know resigned from two clubs that represented her main diversions, because her husband in a fit of temper accused her of being a gadabout, never wanting to stay home or do any work. Yet she knew perfectly well that when he was himself he was part of the part she played in the clubs and delighted to have her enjoy them.

Of course people ought not to have fits of temper and say things that they don't mean. But most of us sometimes do. And we can get a lot more happiness and peace in life if instead of storing up the things said in anger as grievances, we put them in their proper place in the scheme of things.

HIGHLAND POLICEMAN.

Recently a Highland policeman, not many weeks imported from the island of Jura, approached to where a number of young men were standing in a knot on the pavement of one of the busier streets of the Western metropolis, and pushing them somewhat roughly, exclaimed, "if you'll be going to stand here, my lads, you'll have to be moving about."

"Is this not a free country?" demanded one of the fellows, somewhat sharply.

"This is not a free country at all, you tam sheep's head," shouted the now enraged member of the law. "This is one of the largest cities in the town of Glasgow!"

CHURCH POPULARITY.

"How is it, John," said a Minister to his man, "that you never go a message for me anywhere in the parish but you contrive to take too much spirits? People don't offer me spirits when I'm making visits in the parish."

"Well, sir," said John, "I canna precisely explain it, unless on the supposition that I'm a wee bit mair popular wi some o' the folks maybe than you are."

DENOMINATIONAL GRAVES.

For some time after the disruption of the Churches in Scotland, an unkindly feeling existed between the Minister of the Established Churches and their protesting brethren. Several "free" parishioners of Blackford, Perthshire, waited on the Rev. Mr. Clark, the Established Minister, and requested that they might have the services of a Non-Breastian Sexton.

"Will you allow us, sir," said one of the deputation, "to dig our own graves?"

"Certainly, gentlemen," said Mr. Clark, "you are most welcome, and the sooner the better!"

A WIDOW'S PROMISE.

The Clerk of a large parish, not five miles from Bridgenorth, Scotland, perceiving a female crossing a churchyard in a widow's garb with a watering can and bundle, had the curiosity to follow her, and he discovered her to be Mrs. Smith, whose husband had not long been interred. The following conversation took place:—

"Ah, Mrs. Smith, 'what are you doing with your watering can?"

"Why, Mr. Prince, I have begged a few hay-seeds, which I have in a bundle, and am going to sow them upon my husband's grave, and have brought a little water with me to make 'em spring."

"You have no occasion to do that, as the grass will soon grow upon it," replied the clerk.

"Ah, Mr. Prince, that may be but you know my husband, who now lives there, made me promise him on his death-bed I would never marry again till the grass grew over his grave, and having a good offer made me, I dinna wish to break my word, or be kept as I am."

MEANNESS VERSUS CRUSTINESS.

A rather mean and parsimonious old lady called one day upon David Dreghorn, a well known Glasgow fishmonger, saying, "Weel, Maister Dreghorn, how are ye selling your half salmon the noo?" David being in a rather cross humor, replied, "When we catch only half salmon, men, we'll let ye ken!"

A VIGOROUS TRANSLATION.

"What is the meaning of ex-nihilo nihil fit?" asked a Highlander of a Village Schoolmaster.

"Weel, Donald," answered the dominie, "I dinna mind the literal translation, but it just means that ye canna tak the brooks off a Highlandman."

A DEFINITION OF BAPTISM.

A Scotch clergyman, one day catechizing his flock in the church, the headie (Minister's man), or church officer, being somewhat ill-read in the Catechism, thought it best to keep a modest place near the door, in the hope of escaping the inquisition. But the clergyman observed and called him forward. "John," said he, "what is baptism?" "Ou, sir," answered John, scratching his head, "ye ken, it's just saxpence to me, and aftersence to the presbiter."

DEFINITION OF METAPHYSICS.

A Scotch blacksmith, being asked the meaning of "Metaphysics," explained it as follows: "When the party who listens dinna ken what the party who speaks means, and when the party who speaks dinna ken what he means himself—that is 'Metaphysics.'"

AN "EXCEPTIONAL" PRAYER.

A Minister in the North of Scotland, returning thanks in his prayers one Sabbath for the excellent harvest, began as usual, "O Lord, we thank Thee," etc., and went on to mention the abundance of the harvest and its safe ingathering; but feeling anxious to be quite candid and scrupulously truthful, added, "all except a few fields between this and Stonehaven not worth mentioning."
