Honorably Discharging Their Debts

WILL MEET $500,000 LIABILITIES OF OLD FIRM. Manchester, Eng., Aug. 25.-Two outstanding instances of financial integrity have just come to public

Twenty-eight years ago Ernest Senior, head of a small printing company, became bankrupt through having to fulfill a bond security for another undertaking. His liabilities were $6,700, and he received an immediate discharge from bankruptcy, But he told his creditors that he would not rest until he had paid everyone in full.

He went back to his work at a small wage, but he managed so that his total expenses were never more than £1 ($5) per week. The remainder of his pay he set aside for his creditors' benefit.

He has just met his 34 creditors and paid them in full, with inter-

Miss Eastwood, of Derby, has just performed a somewhat similar duty. More than a hundred years ago her grandfather started, in Digby, the firm of Eastwood & Swingler, engineers. A few weeks ago the company failed on account of the slump in engineering in Britain. Although Miss Eastwood only had a very small holding in the concern, she has voluntarily taken on herself to meet all the firm's liabilities-$500.000.

Miss Eastwood wanted the matter to be kept private and, when interviewed, declared that her action was not one of public interest.

"There was nothing very noble about it," she said. "I was brought | up to believe that if one did not act decently, one had better be dead. What I am doing is the only thing I could do. It was just up to me to preserve the good name of the family and of the firm.

Missioner Captive of Bandits Tells of His Experience

Father De Clippelle, the Belgian missionary who was taken prisoner by a band of Chinese outlaws, January 24 last, and remained in their hands until April 7, is on a visit to his native land, none the worse, he says, for his dreadful experience. After fifteen years of strenuous labours in the Celestial Empire, he is gathering strength for further apostolate there, dividing his days of repose between his people at Alost, in Flanders, and his confreres, the Scheutist Fathers, at their motherhouse, near Brussels. Thither friends and admirers wend their steps to hear him recount the incidents of a seventy-eight-day wandering captivity.

Ransom Demanded.

His daily compulsory diversion during that time was to ride either horse or mule in the unsought-for companionship of brigands, now pillaging the villages scattered about the country, now skirmishing with the Government troops sent out in pursuit, or, when outnumbered, fleeing before them. Ten days he spent in a wagon, by the side of the corpse of a captured and assassinated non-commissioned officer, conveyed along to serve as a trophy.

The bandits had demanded by mail from the Superior of the mission a ransom of either fifty Mauser rifles and twelve revolvers or of ten thousand American dollars. Failure to comply with the demand within ten days, they wrote, would mean death for the captive. Before the time specified had elapsed the troop had to seek refuge in flight without carrying out the dire threat of death. It continued to hang over the missionary, who was constanly made to realize the fate that awaited him by the sight of the murders committed under his very

Once he saw a boy, not ten years old, who had been led along as a hostage from one of the looted villages, frightfully tortured and finally killed. Another time he witnessed the cruel execution of a woman who had dared to protest against the kidnapping of her child.

At times the death penalty inflicted upon hostages assumed the character of a patriotic religious ceremony-of a sacrifice to the colours, as it were.

Saw Prisoner Decapitated. Camping one day in large numbers upon a plateau, their standards planted about the tents, the cut-throats brought forward one of their hostages stripped him to the waist, and ordered him to salute the flag. As he did so, bending his head low in obedient. submission, a soldier, at one fell stroke, severed it from its trunk, ration of birdseed. Whereupon the standard-bearers rushed forward and dipped their pennants in the slain man's blood. The priest made several futile at-
