BROWNE'S ENGLISH DIREC-

TORY. Many literary men spend months of labor in writing a history or story. Readers of T. B. Browne's English Newspaper Directory for 1895 will doubtless be astonished at the amount of ability that is shown in the 1,128 pages of its carefully compiled work. The 1895 issue has been received by the "Advertiser," and it is doubtful if a more complete newspaper directory is to be found. It contains an enormous amount of information relating to the vast number of newspapers printed in the British colonies and in foreign countries. It is also an excellent specimen of the printer's art. Any "Advertiser" reader will be shown a copy by calling at the counting-room of this establishment.

HE WILL SOON BE HERE! It has been mentioned in these columns that Sousa is coming to town, and when Sousa and his famous band and his delightful assisting artists are here there will be music in the air. And in point of fact there is music in pretty much every air that Sousa plays. His concert occurs on Tuesday next. To use an Irishism, the only ones present who will be unhappy on that occasion will be those who are absent. The plan for the evening performance is rapidly filling, and the public are advised to secure seats early to avoid disappointment. It will be a gala day for London next Tuesday.
