BRITISH POLICE
MAKE CHARGES
AGAINST "EARL"Self-Styled Scion of House of Dunblane Wanted in England.

COURT SIFTS LOVE STORY

State Authorities Investigate
Financial and Matrimonial Adventure.

Charlevoix, Mich., Nov. 17.—At the morning session of the trial of a mysterious "Earl of Dunblane" life was brought to light, the prosecution seems determined to lay bare all that Greig has done in America. Yesterday, an attempt to discover his operations in England was made. Greig has realized this. He sees that it is not only his finances that are being examined, but also himself, his character; not only the companies, which he floated, but also the lives he led with the women he married and supported—one in Toronto, and one in Michigan.

Attorneys for the state declared during cross examination of the defendant that he was being Scotland Yard. The charge said to be pending against Greig in England was not divulged.

Ask Detention.
The sheriff's office here has already received requests for Greig's detention, in event he is acquitted, from authorities from several cities, as well as Detroit.

The prisoner is accused of withholding $30,000 of the company funds, refused yesterday to answer numerous questions relating to the operations of the defunct Title Guaranty and Casualty Company, organized by him.

Greig is a changed man. Some of the self-confidence showed still as he walked to the witness stand, but his smile and his eyes were seared by two furrows of worry. His pince-nez is discarded. Heavy rimmed spectacles half shade his eyes.

The countless does not sit in the courtroom any more. She visits her husband in the jail during the session she is sequestered in an ante-room.

Story of Loves.
The story of Greig's marriage to this woman, his love in Michigan, proved interesting to the audience, which thronged the court today. He married the woman four years ago, in Sault Ste. Marie. He married her under the name of Alfred, Earl of Dunblane. He gave his residence as Nottingham, England, and his age as 36.

He said he was an English barrister. The countless had nothing from him.

She told him that she was a divorcee; that she had been married to Wilbur Dye of Chicago. She put this on the marriage certificate. He registered her previous marriage.

But Greig, this Alfred, Earl of Dunblane, did not respond in kind, when asked if he had been married before, he said no. This was shown on the certificate, produced this morning. Greig admitted to the prosecution. He admitted that he had fooled the countless, but he denied that he had fooled her ever since.

Paying Alimony.
At the time that he had married her, at the time he had told her that he had no other wife, he was paying Christina Greig in Toronto $200-$100 per house rent, and what, she termed in court today, alimony.

Yet he said he had never been divorced from her. After he and the countless were married, they went to Chicago. Her two children were put in a private school. He and she lived with her parents, the Turngreys.

"We were then in money," said the earl, in explanation to the prosecution's query as to how he had come to live on his father-in-law's, the Earl of Dunblane, but he said that he had bought the castle at Cheboygan. He paid $1,000 down, and mortgaged the rest. In court he said that he had put some $12,000 improvements on the property.

Goes On Trials.
Further evidence showed that Greig had taken his countless with him on business trips. He had taken her to Montreal. He had taken her to Toronto and had registered at the King Edward Hotel as Alfred Earl of Dunblane and the countless.

"Was wife No. 1 living there then?" inquired the prosecution.
"I object that is not proven if she was wife No. 1," interjected Lisie Shaubman for the defense.

"But he does not deny," said Smith, "and he says he never was divorced." That settled the question. Greig admitted that his No. 1 was in Toronto at the same time as the countless.

"Did you see her then or the countless see her?" asked Smith.
"No," was Greig's reply.
"Did you want to see her?" continued the attorney.

Did Not See Wife.
Greig hung his head for a moment. He looked around the court. He leaned forward. He murmured "No." It was in a low tone. Very few could hear him, just the judge, the attorneys, the jurors.

Then Smith questioned him regarding certain stock payments. Greig admitted that a $250 check given by Sloan of Boyne City for stock had been put in a draft, countersigned by himself and Bertha J. Turngreys, his sister-in-law, and presented at Marshall Field's, Chicago.

He maintained that he did not know that every dollar from stock subscriptions should have gone to Sloan in Detroit, a joint deposit with the Michigan Securities Commission. He admitted that he had deposited parts of money from stock subscriptions in ignorance, and that it was there that he had sent $240.67 cents, part of a subscription by Mary E. Miller, who laid the embelishment charge.

He stated that it was an impossibility to deposit 85 cents on the dollar in Detroit, as required by the M. S. C. Part of it must be used for expense accounts and salaries, he said.

TELLS OF DOGS
Shows Cruelty of Careless Motorists.

During the past year over 500 dogs have been run over by local motorists. This, in all conscience, is bad enough, but to make matters worse, some of the dogs had been left lying on the roadway to die. The lucky ones are killed outright, those more unfortunate crawl to the side of the road, there to starve or freeze. The owner may never know what has happened to his canine friend, and those responsible for his injury hardly seem to care.

Mr. Tustin of the Humane Society has, at the present time, a beautiful Alsatian that was run over by a car about a week ago. This dog was able to crawl into the hedge by the roadside and there he has been for four days receiving attention.

The dog appears to be injured about the back, his hind legs are paralyzed and his chances of recovery appear slim.

Only Skin and Bone.
Saturday afternoon on the market a three weeks' old pup that was only skin and bone, this little fellow now has a comfortable home with the Humane Society, and though by no means fat, is looking well and fit.

A few days ago one of the contractors who was hauling supplies to the university was found to be working four teams that were not in a fit state to be used. He was summoned by the society, fined and prevented from using these teams for a period of some weeks.

Another teamster was found using a whip with a heavy leather that might have been used on an elephant, a long, brutal affair of four or five feet, that has since gone into Mr. Tustin's chamber of horrors to be shown to those who are interested in the great work that is being done on behalf of our dumb friends.

Throughout October the inspector averaged over 21 calls daily. Every day he looks over the teams that are out to the Manor Park gravel pits, and he describes as the worst he has ever seen.

The pits themselves are in a very bad state, and there is practically no road running into them, with the result that horses and teams are frequently mired with consequent strain and too often the stinging lashes of the teamster's whip.

Of the horses of London in general Mr. Tustin is quite enthusiastic, though he is a little less pleased with the treatment meted out to the horses in the surrounding country. As an instance of the very high view Mr. Tustin takes of his work it might be mentioned that he never sells any of the animals who fall into his care. If he is able to find a good home for them, so much the better; if not, they are painlessly destroyed.

The inspector believes that to introduce such a system in order to raise funds is to defeat the whole purpose of the society's work.

The inspector has a most interesting place out on Victoria street, where old and abused horses find a new and kind life. He is always glad to show anyone the kennels and to explain the variety and extent of his work, the extent of which can be judged when it is pointed out that he has satisfied many results, the use of a horse and buggy is necessary.

She claims she shot her husband in self defence. He had, she said, been abusive to her and her children, and there were eight, for some time past.

FRENCH "TIGER"
STARTS TO WIN
HEARTS OF U.S.Georges Clemenceau Arrives
at New York on Liner
Paris.

HARDEST FIGHT OF LIFE

Intends to Stress the German Menace and Dispel Idea of French Militarism.

Special to The London Advertiser.

New York, Nov. 18.—Georges Clemenceau, grizzled old Tiger of France, arrived at New York today for the hardest battle of his tempestuous and domineering career—to win American public opinion for France.

Before dawn the giant liner Paris was anchored off Queensboro, and soon after the 81-year-old war premier of France was on deck to catch the first glimpse of America that he had had for more than half a century.

Vessels saluted his salutes, and the mayor's yacht, Macom, with a welcoming committee aboard, steamed out to bring "Le Tigre" to the city. Clemenceau will be greeted officially by the United States government through Third Assistant Secretary of State Bliss, this arrangement apparently being a compromise over the delicate situation created by the Frenchman's great prominence, and the fact that he has no official status.

Julius J. Jusserand, French ambassador at Washington, also will welcome the statesman to the American shore.

Base His Campaign.

The Tiger will base his campaign in America on the following points: 1. Will try to dispel the belief that France is now the great military power of Europe, and he will stress the German danger; that according to the contention of France makes necessary that country have an army of 800,000 men.

He will maintain that close co-operation between the United States and France and Great Britain is the stepping stone to world peace, and that the United States must be able to draw on the French alliance, drawn up in Versailles, and rejected by the American people, as the best means of bringing about that co-operation.

Constitute Easy Index.
The big controversial subjects on which Clemenceau will speak constitute an index to the difficulty of his task, but the inside facts of the attitude of coolness of the American government toward France on the outstanding world questions of the day have led many observers to fear that the Old Tiger's self-appraisal is well well high impossible.

France, through Premier Briand's speech in Washington, blocked any suggestion that the United States put a check on land armaments at the limitation of armaments conference. France's demands on the shipping tonnage was considered excessive, and her checkmating of a limitation of submarines caused official and general disfavor and chagrin in the United States.

At the time, the "Father of the Victory" by his hat and cane, as he puts it, unsupported by the French government for better relations with his country and the United States.

The effectiveness of appraisal work recently done in the city of New York on postoffice leases has gone far toward convincing federal officials that they can avail themselves of the special knowledge and expert advice of realtors throughout the United States and Canada to good advantage.

The offer of the National Association in this respect has been very favorably received at Washington, and is expected that further requests for appraisals at various points in the United States will be made shortly.

President Benwick has written President Upham that the local board is co-operating with him in this respect in so far as the city of London is concerned, and therefore the services of the arbitration committee of the local board is at the service of the federal government of Canada or the provincial government of Ontario in making at least an appraisal of federal property in the city of London.

TO CONSIDER TENDERS FOR SOUTHEAST CITY SCHOOL.
Trustees Believe Lowest Bid, for Certain Reasons, Should Not Be Accepted.

A special session of No. 2 committee of the board of education will be called early next week to consider the tenders for the proposed public school for Southeast London.

Five tenders in all—two from out of the city—have been opened, and members of the board of education have already expressed the opinion that the lowest tender submitted should not be considered at all.

Although the trustees are somewhat reticent in this respect, it is known that they feel, as they are said to have transacted business with this party before, that the tender should not be considered. They have several good reasons, they assert.

From interviews obtained there seems to be much opposition to the city's purchase of the company, even at the greatly reduced price at which the company now offers to sell.

OTTAWA ELECTRIC ROAD OFFERS TO SELL SYSTEM

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—Announcement that the Ottawa Electric Railway Company had offered to sell out its entire system, and all its assets for $4,500,000 has stirred up surprising diversity of opinion among prominent businessmen and large taxpayers of the city as to whether the city should entertain the proposition.

From interviews obtained there seems to be much opposition to the city's purchase of the company, even at the greatly reduced price at which the company now offers to sell.

Washington, Nov. 18.—(Canadian Press.)—Reports that the farm bloc in congress is to be wiped out and merged into a larger organization of Progressive members of senate and house are not borne out by the farm bloc leaders.

As a matter of fact, they are convinced that their hands are much strengthened by the elections, and they are already working on a broader program of legislation relative to agriculture than ever. All the indications are that instead of being wiped out or merged into a new organization, the farm bloc will go ahead and take a more aggressive course.

NATURAL RICHES IN WEST
PROBLEM AGAIN ARISES

Outlook for Settlement of Age-Old Question Diminishes When Prairie Province Plenipotentiaries Depart From Ottawa Without Making Headway.

CONVENIENT POLITICAL FOOTBALL

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—Another effort to settle the apparently age-long problem of the disposition of the natural resources of the western provinces has ended in failure, and the plenipotentiaries from the prairie provinces are returning to their respective capitals with hope of a settlement almost banished for ever from their hearts.

The date of the first emergence of the problem is lost in the mists of antiquity, but it first became an acute issue about the year 1910, when that merry pair of Tory statesmen, Sir Rodman Roblin and Robert Rogers raised it mainly in order to embarrass the Laurier government and provide themselves with a grievance.

Subsequently provincial elections were fought upon the question in Saskatchewan and in Manitoba, and a series of meetings, at which the real estate boom lasted and the west was enjoying steady prosperity, there was no real popular enthusiasm behind the demands of political leaders for the restoration of the natural resources to provincial control, but once the boom passed and the state of provincial finances demanded necessitous high taxation and careful husbandry, the people of the prairie regions almost with one accord became convinced that the control of their natural resources by Ottawa was an injustice.

So all three provincial governments combined to demand restoration from first the coalition and then the Meighen governments, and all political parties united their efforts.

Repeated negotiations and conference took place, but no real headway was made, and the problem was turned over as a legacy to Mackenzie King.

He made his first effort at a settlement last spring when he summoned the western premiers to Ottawa and explored the problem. As the result of a series of meetings, it was found more possible to approach an accommodation with Premier Norris of Manitoba than with the premiers of Saskatchewan and Alberta, who were more exigent in their demands, and while no final settlement was arrived at, with Manitoba it was thought a basis should be secured.

Anyhow, Mr. King, on April 21 of this year, claimed to have made substantial progress had been made, and read the following memo for the information of the house:

"As between the government of Manitoba and the Dominion government it has been agreed:

"(1) That it is desirable and just that such adjustments be made between the Dominion of Canada and the prairie provinces with respect to their natural resources as will give full recognition to the principle that in this respect they are entitled to be treated on a position of equality with the other provinces of the Dominion.

"(2) That the government of Canada will negotiate an agreement with the prairie provinces to the effect that subject to ratification by Parliament and the respective legislatures,

"(3) That failing agreement on any point as between the Dominion and Province of Manitoba, all such items so in dispute shall be referred to arbitration.

Referred to Arbitration.

JEALOUS SUITOR
KILLS TWO WOMEN

Copatis Beach, U.S.A., Sheriff Finds Mutilated Bodies in Cabin.

Special to The Advertiser.
Aberdeen, Wash., Nov. 18.—Two women were murdered, one being terribly mutilated by an insane, jealous suitor, who then wounded a supposed rival, and committed suicide, according to an account of the triple tragedy made public today by Sheriff Gibson of Copatis Beach, twenty miles north of Aberdeen.

The sheriff told of piecing together the murder story as he found, one after the other, the bodies of the victims. First Gibson came across the body of Miss Tolton. The girl had fought desperately for her life, according to the sheriff's report, before she was killed on the beach, shot in the back and mutilated.

A few minutes later, in a nearby cabin, Gibson found the body of Mrs. J. T. O'Brien. The woman was dead. She had apparently been dragged from bed and shot through the breast.

Following the murder trail from one of the little cabins in the group at Copatis Beach to the next, the sheriff came upon the body of Hjalmar Anderson. One flat clutched an old service revolver. With the other, the dead man still clung to a bloody pocket knife.

Nearby, in his own shack, Gibson found John Berg suffering from a knife wound, which Berg declared he had sustained in a fight with Anderson before the latter committed suicide.
