It turned for a fight on the colored issue. It turned out that there was a majority and minority report. The former antagonized the proposition to create provisional departments for the colored man, thus going counter to the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief. The minority report supported the latter, and ended with a resolution recommendining the erection of separate departments for colored comrades in Louisians and other Southern States, and empowering the Commander-in-Chief to take action accordingly. This was greeted with grosus and hisses from the colored contingent in the zallery: After a decidedly with groens and hisses from the colored contingent in the gallery. Interesting Account of the Cruise of the Thetis-Chasing Sealing Schooners.

Seals.

(Seattle Pest-Intelligencer.) Major James R. Hayden received on Wednesday from A. C. Almy, who is on the U. S. gunboat Thetis, a letter containing an interesting account of that vessel's cruise to the sealing grounds of the north. Under date of July 13th, Mr. Almy writes at Unalaska: We arrived at Sand Point on June 28.

after several days of rough weather. It is situated in latitude 55 degrees 17 minutes north, and longitude 160 degrees 31 minutes and 55 seconds west, and is a quiet little harbor with good anchorage, which gives entire protection in all winds. The agree-ment to stop sealing made between the United States and Great Britain, was conment to stop sealing made between the United States and Great Britain, was concluded in Washington on June 15, 1891, and was telegraphed word for word to San Francisco, where several hundred copies were printed for distribution by the ships. Eleven days after that we began to carry out the instructions by boarding two sealing schooners at sea, and giving them each a copy of the president's proclamation and letter of warning from the commanding officer. Since then we have been cruising almost continually and boarding every sealer we ran across, either American or British. Among the first we boarded were the J. H. Lewis and Allie I. Algar, of Seattle, and the following from Port Townsend: George B. White, Venzure, Henry Denis, Emmet Felix and J. G. Swan,

The commanding officer enters in ink in the schooner's register or log, ever his own signature, a certificate that the proclamation and letters of warning have been delivered to them, and stating the number of seal skins then on board. In case the same schooner is overhauled by any other "naval or other duly commissioned officers of either of the high contracting parties," and mere skins are found on board than at first certified to, the schooner "may be seized and detained but they shall be handed over as detained, but they shall be handed over as soon as practicable to the authorities of the nation to which they respectively belong, who shall alone have jurisdiction to try the offense and impose the penalties for the same."

These sealers have all been fitted out

These sealers have all been fitted out at large expense for the season's work, and it will be a great loss to them to be compelled to give up their occupation so summarily. It seems very hard that men who have to work at such a hard living should not meet with better success.

We only stayed ten hours at Sand Point and went to work at once chasing sealers. We boarded nine who were at anchor at Sand Point, and they were surprised enough to hear of the proclamation. Then we cruised to the eastward and dodged in and around 'the Shumagin islands, overhauling several sealers; then we cruised to the westward along the south side of the Aleutian islands, through Unimak pass to Unalaska, a small village of 200 inhabitants, mostly Americans and Aleuts, situated en the north side of Unalaska island, where the Alaska Commercial company have their principal station.

where the Alaska Commercial company have their principal station.

We arrived there on July 3rd, and found the Corwin, Rush and Al-Ki in port. The last is a passenger steamer of the Pacific Coast Steamship company, which has been chartered by the Tressury department for $300 per day as a prison ship, where sealers who do not heed the warning to stop sealing are to be kept until turned over to the proper courts. She has on board one line officer of the navy, Lieut.-Commander Meade, three marine officers and a surgeon in charge of 40 marines.

across their bows from our Hotchkiss gun to make them heave to. We have no blank cartridges, so a four-pound ball whistling through the air attracted their notice to good effect.

We arrived at St. Paul Island the evening of July 7th, and our ancherage off the village under the lee of Reef Point gave us good protection from a gale of wind which lasted a night and a day.

Early the morning of the 8th, eight of the officers, including myself, and twenty of the men, went ashore to witness the rounding up of 500 seals, from which 100 were killed for food for the natives. The skins were of course taken by the company, for each of which $36 is the market price in London. The company pays $10 for each skin taken and $30,000 annually for the privilege of sealing. There are $10 for each skin taken and $00,000 annually for the privilege of sealing. There are several rookeries on the island where the seals are to be found this season of the year; each is literally alive with seal on the rocks, and in the water on the shore. There are the "bull," "cow," "bachelor" and "pup" seal, and as we passed by and partly through the rookery the sight of over 100,000 of these animals on the rocks together, was one of the most interesting and wonderful I ever saw.

The seals are easily driven, and the native drivers suddenly come up from leeward, detach a certain number by dodging between them and the main lot and drive them up on shore to a distance of about half them up on shore to a distance of about half seventh century in order to preserve a mile.

The seal can travel very fast on the water, and can make from forty to fifty miles a day on the land. Groups of about twenty seals are next detached, and the "bachelor" seals that are three and four years old are knocked over the head with a club by the native clubbers and atunned. They are then laid over on their backs and stunk through the heart with a share, hife arrival called upon the authorities for Prompt action was assured her.
