Another striking feature of this part of the book is the unpronounceable names some of the leaders in these early wars possessed. A text-book of this kind is calculated to give a child a distaste for Canadian history which in many cases survives the pupil's school days. A committee consisting of the superinten dents of education of the various provinces, with certain delegates from each province, has been formed to have charge of all arrangements for the new history, and this committee is now inviting offers from persons wishing to undertake to write the forthcoming work dian provinces. The history of the east, and it since 1867 contains much of interest, and it is understood that this part of the forth-coming work is to be quite full and complete. Here then is an opportunity for some of our students and writers not only to distin-

by communicating with the superintentation of education. —Those people who are always predicting a great European war have been kept pret-ty busy of late. And, indeed, there have been several clouds in the east, a good deal bigger than a man's hand, out of which trouble may yet arise. The success of the superior in the Siamese episode and the subtrouble may yet arise. The success of France in the Siamese episode and the sub-sequent triamph of the French ministry in the recent general election, have led to a good deal of boasting on the part of certain French newspapers. Prompted by these boastings, combined with certain other things, the emperor of Germany resolved to things, the emperor of Germany resolved to things, the emperor of Germany resolved to celebrate the anniversary of Sedan with much more pomp and display this year than on former occasious. So an immense Ger-man army is assembled on the French bord-er, and the crown prince of Italy, the Chan-cellor, and a number of other German digni-taries are invited to witness the manœuvers of this gulendidly conjuned and theoremails taries are invited to witness the manceuvers of this splendidly equipped and thoroughly drilled body of men-probably the finest in Europe. Then the young emperor makes a speech, recounts the exploits of these sol-diers in the past, and gives it to be under-stood that they are prepared to do the same again should the occasion arise, all of which, of course, is irritating to the last degree to the Participation of the solution the French.

While this is going on by land, the Russian fleet joins that of France, and a demonstration equally as impresive is made by stration equally as impresive is made by these combined fleets, off the coast of France. While all this was taking place last week European statesmen were holding their breath and wondering what would happen the humiliating defeat of the late war. Just when and how the conflict will begin re-mains to be seen. That it will surely come, sooner or later, is inevitable. —Just at present, the United States is af-fording a valuable object lesson to the peo-ple of the rest of the world. It is illustrat-ing to a marked degree the evils of unwise legislation. Apart from this there is really not the slichtest reason in the world why not the slightest reason in the world why not the slightest reason in the world why our neighbors should now be undergoing such a terrible commercial and financial crisis. For several years past the harvests through-out the land have been unusually good. In a land blessed with peace and an abundance of everything, what has produced the pre-sent panic? President Cleveland attributes it to the result of unwise laws and he is doubtless correct. We sometimes hear it doubtless correct. We sometimes hear it 000.

doubliess correct. We sometimes hear it said that laws can make and cure but few of the ills which men endure. But this, while it may be correct to some extent as regards individuals, is far from so as regards the people of a country as a whole. It is of vital importance to a people that the laws made for their government and welfare should be wise and just; that their public affairs should be righteœusly and honesti united States party lines are well nigh oh administered. In the present crisis in the United States party lines are well nigh ob-literated and party politics to a certain de-gree forgotten. It would have been much better had this been the case before the trouble arose. Prevention is better than cure, and other nations may well take warn-ing from the better experience of our neigh-bors and avoid the evils from which they are suffering. It does make a vast deal of difference after all what kind of laws our difference after all what kind of laws our

are somering. It does make a value doal of laws out parliaments make, and how our affairs are administered.

A slight cause would kindle a war of which no person could predict the result. The young emperor of Germany talks elo-quently about maintaining the peace of Europe but all such talk seems a good deal like a hollow mockery.
