The Monitor has frequently advocat ed a Merchant's Day for Bridgetown Wherever it has been tried it has continued as a permanent institution and our merchants are not generally behind the times in any enterprising people are protesting, this is one the ways in which it may be drawn out of the pockets or out of the banks and generally speaking their venture has could doubtless attract not only their send to-Toronto, A bargain has ple, and few, who have any money ten purchasing Lower. stores opened crowds were waiting at the doors of many of the places of business in the centre of the town. Proprietors and clerks went without their meals and simply hus tled the remainder of the day. What surprised us was the few merchants who had thoroughly prepared for the usual staff of clerks were em pleyed the customers had to wait for hours or so away, and make their purchases elsewhere This was er towns is to take on a half dozen or a dozen the day before, have have one cashier, and drill every body. Then when the day arrives the people can be handled and the extra amount of business turned over with ease. The tug George L. brought a full load of excursion ists from Granville and carried a big load of freight on her return trip in the afternoon. The day was certainly a big success and the experience gained this time will be valuable in the future. The cash receints at some of the stores for the day's sales were more than five hundred dollars. A number of merchants did not have a sufficient stock of some lines to supply the demand. Special importations of goods should have been made on purpose for the day." The Courier further states that no circulars, dodgers nor advertising matter of any kind was used. The only way the people had of finding out that there were bargains awaiting them in Digby was through the columns of the Courier, which goes to

"I was a martyr to catarrh of the head, throat and stomach. I was so bad the doctors feared consumption. I tried many physicians and medicines. A friend suggested Psychine. I tried it and it was the only thing ever did me any good. I am now perfectly well, It is the greatest remedy the world has ever known. I do not need it for my health now but I use it as a strengthener for my walking matches. I owe much of my physical endurance to Psychine.'

JAMES REYNOLDS, Port Hope, Ont.

Psychine is the greatest cure for catarrh of the head, throat or stomach in the world. It is a wonderful tonic and strengthener of run down system, acting directly on all the vital organs, civing youthful vicar and strength to resident.
